Senate Approves Old-Age Benefit Boosts

Senate Unit Wants Jaffe Cited for Contempt

Amerasia Editor Wouldn't Aid Quiz; Pat Hurley Has No 'Direct' Information

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The chairman and counsel of the Senate subcommittee investigating charges of Communist infiltration in the Government recommended yesterday that Philip J. Jaffe, principal figure in the Amerasia case, be cited for contempt of Congress.

Chairman Tydings (D., Md.), acted on the recommendation of his counsel, Edward P. Morgan. Jaffe had refused to answer anything but the most elementary self-identification questions when he appeared earlier this month as a witness before the subcommittee.

Later, three other members of the five-man group said they favor the recommendation. They are Senators Green (D., R. I.), Lodge (R., Mass.) and Hickenlooper (R., Iowa). The fifth member, Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), was not immediately available.

Hurley Won't Testify

Tydings' action on Jaffe accompanied a disclosure from the subcommittee that former Ambassador Patrick J. Hurley has declined to testify on the 1945 stolen documents case because he felt his comments would have "no point" unless State Department documents on the matter were made public.

This was the sequence of Hurleys march up the hill and countermarch down again:

On Monday, in Santa Fe, N. Mex., the wartime head of our diplomatic mission to China stated that State Department officials did "steal and did give and sell" secret documents to Amerasia magazine. The now-defunct periodical was edited by Jaffe, whose Communist connections appeared to be close and frequent.

Hurley's charges were primarily aimed at John S. Service, a State Department officer arrested, but not indicted, in the Amerasia matter.

Tydings' subcommittee at once resolved to call Hurley to testify, in view of his comments. Tydings phoned Hurley and said yesterday that the former Ambassador told him he has "no direct" information on the Amerasia case, and that it would be useless for him to testify unless the State Department released certain papers previously denied him.

He had reference to his appearance in 1945 for four days before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, after his resignation from the ambassadorship.

At that time he made repeated charges of being sabotaged in his mission by department career officers. Asked for proof, he replied

Acheson Wins Confidence Of Governors at Conference

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 20.—In a locked-door session of more than two hours, Secretary of State Dean Acheson today replied to questions hurled at him by the Nation's Governors and sought to convince them that there are no Communists in his department.

They asked him about Alger Hiss, about the charges of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) and about the world crisis in general.

When it was all over, Acheson appeared to have done a good job in winning confidence for the State Department. Governors, Republicans as well as Democrats, made such remarks as "satisfying," "wholesome," and "enlightening." If any of them felt otherwise, they kept silent.

One well-known Republican Governor, who asked not to be identified, said that Acheson "swept 'em all".

Another Governor, a Democrat, said that Acheson "scared Hell out of 'em." He explained that when the Secretary and his aides finished outlining the grim situation in the world, and described all that yet must be done to combat the threat of Russian aggression, the charges of Senator McCarthy seemed petty alongside the tremendous importance of American unity in foreign affairs.

Secretary Acheson's appearance here in the Greenbrier was easily the most dramatic event of the forty-second annual Governors' Conference. A resolution expressing confidence in his department will be voted on before the conference comes to an end Wednesday.

Altogether Acheson was before the Governors three and a half hours. The scene was the Greenbrier auditorium.

In a glare of kleig lights, Acheson stood at the head of a green-topped table, before the massed flags of the 48 States, with the

New 'Pack Plane' Bears 'Pod' Detachable Like Truck Trailer

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Air Force yesterday announced the completion of a revolutionary new military transport plane at the Fairchild plant in Hagerstown, Md.—a twin-engined craft with a detachable fuselage.

Aimed primarily for use in aerial invasions, the XC-120 applies the highway truck-trailer principle to military air transport. Fairchild engineers also forecast that it eventually will transform commercial air cargo operations.

As rolled out of the production hangar yesterday the "Pack Plane" closely resembled the Fairchild C-82 "Flying Boxcar" and C-119 Packet. It has the same low-slung, fat fuselage and twin booms and tail surfaces.

But, like the road-borne truck-trailer, the fuselage—or "pod"—is quickly detachable from the rest of the plane. The plane itself—wings, engines, cockpit, booms, and tail—can fly with or without the fuselage. Army and Air Force chiefs—under whose orders the aircraft was developed—see these two main advantages for the type:

(1) Weapons and supplies can be more quickly brought into an "airhead" during the crucial first hours or days of an aerial invasion. The "pod", with its 10-ton load, can be quickly detached from the airplane, and hauled to a dispersed area for unloading.

The plane itself can immediately take off without fuselage and return to the rear depot for another load, or pick up a podful of wounded men at the airhead. Should the seized airstrip be under attack, this cuts down the time the airplane is on the ground.

2. Instead of being conventional cargo containers, the detachable "packs" can be fitted out as self-

Industry Pool Must Succeed, Schuman Says

Paris, June 20 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Robert Schuman today called on delegates of six western European nations to set up swiftly the machinery for pooling their heavy industry under a "super" authority—independent of individual governments.

Schuman spoke at the opening session of the conference summoned by him to work out a plan for tying together western Europe's coal and steel production. Britain was significant by her absence. Germany was taking part on a basis of equality.

"Never has a system resembling that which we have in view been attempted," Schuman told the men from Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, western Germany, Italy and his own country.

"Never have states entrusted, nor even considered, jointly delegating a fraction of their authority to an independent, supra-national organization."

Peace Factor Stressed

The Foreign Minister said the plan can wipe out all need for war between Germany and France and join them together in peaceful association.

"We are determined to associate in a joint and permanent task of peace the two nations that for centuries have been opposed in bloody competition," Schuman said.

"We are not allowed to fail or give up without result," he warned.

Britain alone of the big industrial nations of west Europe refused to pledge in advance to support the pool principle.

Schuman went out of his way to emphasize that Britain will be kept informed and to express the hope that she might join the pool at a later date. Britain has prepared a plan of her own which may be presented.

"We earnestly would have liked Great Britain to be present," Schuman said. "We cannot conceive of Europe without her."

The French have prepared the draft of a plan, which they will put forth as a working proposal. Reliable informants said its highlights were:

CAA Here Probes 'War Alert' Tale From Canal Zone

NYHT News Service

Air Force and National Defense headquarters yesterday heard reports—which neither was able to confirm—that Panama Canal defense forces were thrown into a "war alert" last Saturday by a spurious report of a western European invasion.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration's Canal Zone Airways teletype system was said to have sent the "invasion report" into the Balboa offices of various airlines serving this area.

The CAA started an investigation to find out where the message had originated, who put it on the wires and why.

The message reportedly said western Europe had been invaded by a force of "more than 100,000 Russian troops" supported by hordes of heavy tanks and swarms of dive bombers.

Airline officials said they "believed" a local alert was declared in the Canal Zone while defense officials checked on the report and found it groundless.

Judy Garland Tries Suicide With Smashed Drinking Glass

Hollywood, June 20 (U.P.).—Judy Garland, the singing star of many movies, attempted suicide last night in the midst of a conference about her blighted career.

Her studio disclosed today that the actress had cut her throat with a broken drinking glass. She missed the jugular vein and was treated for a "superficial laceration," the announcement said.

Her physician later described the wound as "several minor scratches" on her neck. He said they required no treatment, and, he added, "in my opinion there was no intent of self-injury."

The actress had been despondent over illness and career troubles, that were climaxed by her suspension by MGM Saturday. She made the suicide attempt while conferring at home with her business manager, Carlton Alsop, and her husband, Director Vincent Minelli, about her suspension, her second by MGM.

MGM executives chopped her off the payroll Saturday when she failed to show up to begin a movie with Fred Astaire, "Royal Wedding."

Alsop said she "just didn't feel well" and telephoned the studio that she couldn't make arehearsal. He said her studio bosses told him yesterday she already had been late to several rehearsals.

"They said that raised their overhead 20 percent and they thought it would be better to replace her. She's a sick girl'

5-Day Police Week Bill Reported Out

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senate District Committee approval was voted for a dozen bills yesterday, including those to cut the police work week here from six days to five, and to increase sick leave allowances of public school teachers.

One of the bills approved in an afternoon meeting called for increasing District unemployment compensation benefits, but this measure was called back for future committee discussion.

The move was ordered after the meeting by Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) at the request of Republican members who wanted an opportunity to discuss the bill, committee aides said. The bill changes maximum benefits from $20 for 20 weeks to $33 for 26 weeks.

Police Group Approves

The five-day week bill for policemen was adopted by the committee in a form that Pvt. Royce L. Givens, president of the Policemen's Association, reported had the approval of his organization.

The Senate group changed the House-approved bill on two points. It wrote in an increase in the authorized strength of the White House police force from 110 to 133. It decided that the five-day week should take effect when funds are available, rather than July 1.

The committee sidetracked suggestions for two-month to six-month waiting periods on the work-week reduction. The bill applies to the Metropolitan, Park and White House police forces.

Corporation Counsel Vernon West said the District Commissioners told him in the morning that if the bill were made effective when funds were available, they would have no objection to it.

West said that 300 more men would be needed. He reported the cost would be about one million dollars the first year, and would rise to about $1,200,000 by the fifth year. He said the Commissioners had suggested boosting the cigarette tax from 1 cent to 2 cents per pack to raise the money.

Officials See Cost Met

Police officials have counted on budget revision still pending in Congress to provide enough slack to take care of the increased cost of the shorter workweek without tax additions.

Senator Edward L. Leahy (D., R. I.) chairman of the subcommittee that prepared 10 of the 14 bills considered in yesterday's meeting, was warmly praised by Senator Neely for his work.

Leahy joined with Senator Margaret Chase Smith in urging approval of the teachers' sick leave bill. But when Senator J. Allen Frear, jr. (D., Del.) asked if the Board of Education approved the measure, Leahy told him "I guess nobody approves it. It was impossible to get a bill that everybody would approve. We worked out what we felt was the best compromise."

Main features of the compromise, as outlined by Committee

Reorganization of Government

Truman's RFC, Health Plans Approved by House Committee

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

President Truman's plans for a new Department of Health, Education and Security and for the transfer of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Commerce Department yesterday were approved by the House Committee on Executive Expenditures.

Action came on two resolutions introduced by Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.) which would have vetoed the proposal. Committee spokesman said there was no record vote on the rejection of the two resolutions.

The House will pass on the question later. Normally it follows the recommendations of the committee.

The measures have yet to pass the Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures.

Under the reorganization act, the plans will automatically go into effect 90 days after their submission by the President unless either branch of Congress rejects them.

Before acting yesterday afternoon, the committee heard a number of witnesses including Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing, whose administration would be given Cabinet status by one of the plans.

The politically potent support of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the National Farmers Union, the American Veterans Committee, the American Council on Education, and the Army and Navy Union lined up in support of the new Department of Health, Education and Security.

But the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report through its spokesman, Robert L. L. McCormick, told the committee that both plans conflicted with the recommendations of the Hoover Commission.

On Reorganization Plan 27, respecting the creation of the new Cabinet post, the Citizens Committee said:

"Reorganization Plan No. 27 is in conformance with Hoover Commission recommendations only to the extent that it grants departmental status to he Federal Security Agency now administering the social security and educational functions of the Government. The plan is at variance with the Hoover Commission's program in its inclusion in general of health functions in a Department of Health, Education and Security and specifically of one of the units proposed by the Commission for a new United Medical Administration.

"The plan, by creating two autonomous agencies within the new department, diverges sharply from the Hoover Commission principle that responsible and accountable administration requires the vesting of statutory authority in the department head."

The Hoover Commission recommended the transfer of RFC to the Treasury, rather than to Commerce.

Ewing testified that each of the three branches of the new Department of Health, Education and Security would have coequal status.

Longer Rent Control Here Is Approved

By unanimous voice vote, the Senate District Committee yesterday approved a 7-month extension of District rent control.

The bill it forwarded to the Senate is identical with one sent to the floor by the House District Committee. The House bill is slated for action Monday.

Each bill would continue rent controls in the District from the expiration of the existing law on June 30 to January 31, 1951. Each leaves it up to Congress to decide in January about five additional months of District control.

Control of Rooms Lifted

Each measure takes rent control off nonhousekeeping furnished rooms, except rooms for non-transient use in hotels, effective June 30.

Each bill lets the rent administrator accept evidence other than original records in rent increase cases.

What happens to the bill in the Senate may depend on what Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) heading the Senate District Committee, and Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) say to each other next.

Neely feels the bill conforms closely enough to the national rent control extension so that Senator Cain will be bound by a promise not to talk more than 30 minutes against it.

Senator Cain feels that the seven-month extension represents so "unwise and unreasonable" a difference from the six-month extension formula in the national bill that he is relieved from his no-fillibuster promise.

But with Neely making one assumption and Cain another, the latter said he would confer with Neely before finally deciding what to do about the District bill.

Cain conducted a marathon talk against the national rent control extension bill.

The national bill extends Federal rent control through the end of this year, and adds controls through June 30, 1951, only for communities that vote to have it or whose governing bodies decide to continue controls for that period.

Cain said he felt a six-month extension of the District law, plus authority for the Commissioners to extend it for another six months, would better conform to the pattern of the national bill.

Query by Senator Pepper

In yesterday's District Committee meeting, Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) questioned the decontrol of furnished rooms, but was told the recommendation had come from Robert F. Cogswell, District rent administrator.

Senator J. Allen Frear, jr. (D., Del.) proposed amending the bill to remove from controls luxury suites in hotels here, but the move was tabled after several members urged that the bill be kept in the same form as the House bill to speed action.

Chairman Neely said he would confer with Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), majority leader, about finding time to bring the rent bill up for a Senate vote.

He said he also expects to talk with Senator Cain about the measure.

Return of Old Age Bureau To District Voted in House

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The House voted yesterday to return to the metropolitan Washington area the Federal Bureau of Old Age Survivors Insurance, now located in a rented Baltimore warehouse.

Thus the House approved by an almost unanimous voice vote a measure authorizing a new $11,500,000 building for the bureau's 5000 employes "in or near the District."

The bureau has a 15-million-dollar annual payroll. It pays $658,000 a year for its quarters. The agency was moved from Washington to Baltimore 13 years ago.

The bill sailed through the House with strong bipartisan support. It was hailed as "a good housekeeping measure" which may net the Government a million-dollar-a-year saving in rentals and greater operating efficiency.

Baltimore Opposition Loses

The House beat down determined efforts of Representatives Fallon and Bolton, Maryland Democrats, to place the building "in the vicinity of Baltimore."

Fallon agreed with Chairman Whittington (D., Miss.) of the House Public Works Committee that the present Baltimore quarters are inadequate, but based his argument on the "human equation."

To move the bureau to Washington, he said, would mean "uproot-

Commissioners Fix 1951 Tax Rates At the 1950 Figure

District Commissioners yesterday fixed the fiscal 1951 tax rates at the 1950 figures—$2.15 for each $100 assessed value of real estate and $2 per $100 assessed value on tangible personal property.

District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler said he had recommended the action now, although Congress has not yet disposed of the District's appropriation bill, to give District Assessor Edward A. Dent sufficient time to prepare tax bills. The District's budget for the year starting July 1 was based on the present tax rate, Fowler said.

Tax bills are scheduled to go out in August. Semiannual payments on both real estate and personal property are due in September and March, District Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson said. But persons occupying their own homes may request permission to pay real estate taxes quarterly, he added.

Dent also reported to the Commissioners that the assessed value of the District's taxable real estate increased more than 20 million dollars in the last year. The figure now stands at $1,656,000,000, he stated.

House Group Backs Plan to Speed Up Tax

A speedup in corporation income-tax payments, to put about $4,200,000,000 extra into the Federal Treasury over the next five years, was approved yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee.

With this action, the committee completed the writing of its bill cutting $1,010,000,000 from excise taxes. The measure now heads to the House for a vote, probably next Wednesday.

Approval of a speed-up for corporation tax payments came close on the heels of Monday's committee vote to boost taxes by 433 million dollars annually on big corporations.

$600 Million New Revenue

The committee tax staff said the extra tax on corporations and the speed-up plan, with other tax law changes, would provide in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, about 600 million dollars new revenue above the amount lost through the $1,010,000,000 excise cut. Thus this will more than meet President Truman's demand that the bill provide new revenue to offset excise tax cuts before he will sign it.

The speed-up plan was offered by Representative Mills (D., Ark.). By a series of steps over five years, it exentually would bring corporations to the point where they would pay all taxes by June 15 on their income for the previous year.

Corporations now can pay their taxes for the previous year in four quarterly installments. Under Mills' plan, they will pay an increasing amount the first two quarters of each year for the next five years. By that time they will be paying

Los Angeles' 1950 estimated population is 1,954,036, or 116,419 more than Detroit.

Security Bill Adds Millions To Coverage; Tax Base Up

Few of 32 Proposed Amendments Win; Conferees to Act on Different Versions

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate last night overwhelmingly voted to approximately double Social Security benefits and extend Federal old-age insurance coverage to 10 million additional persons.

The vote was 81 to 2. The only "No" votes were cast by Senators Hugh Butler (Nebr.) and Harry P. Cain (Wash.), both Republicans.

Senate approval sent the bill to the House, which passed similar legislation last year. A House-Senate Conference Committee is expected to iron out differences in the two measures and a presidential signature is taken for granted.

Passage came after 3½ hours of steady voting on some 32 amendments, mostly designed to further liberalize the bill. All but a handful of the amendments were voted down.

The Senate agreed, however, to increase the amount of wages subject to Social Security taxes from $3000 under present law to $3600. This would increase taxes on workers earning over that amount, and on their employers, by $9 a year in each case. At the same time, it would lift the maximum individual monthly benefit under the bill to $80.

Other provisions of the bill lift minimum individual benefits from $10 monthly under present law to $25, except for those with very low wages.

The maximum "family benefit" would rise from $85 under present law to $150.

Eligibility requirements are relaxed to bring older workers under the system, with a minimum coverage requirement of six quarters.

The payroll tax rate of 1½ percent each on worker and employer would be held where it is through 1955, in a five-year "freeze." After that the tax would gradually rise from 2 percent beginning in 1956 to 3¼ percent in 1970.

A further Social Security study, looking to ultimate "universal" coverage and ultimately a pay-as-you-go system, was approved by the Senate at the outset of the voting.

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.), in charge of the bill, called a meeting of his group before the Senate showdown and agreed to accept the increase in the taxable wage base and a few other floor changes.

From then on, George was in complete control of the bill. Every further proposed liberalization opposed by George was voted down.

52 Roosevelts In Holland Meet Mrs. FDR, Elliott

Oud Vossemeer, Netherlands, June 20 (U.P.).—Fifty-four Roosevelts, including Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and her son Elliott, held a reunion in the same room today.

"I never knew there were so many Roosevelts," Mrs. Roosevelt said.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Elliott, met the other Roosevelts during a visit to tiny Tholen Island here off the north coast, where, according to Dutch heraldic experts, Farmer Claes Martenszoon van Roosevelt emigrated in 1651 to found what is now the Roosevelt family in the United States.

Villagers thronged the narrow cobbled streets and waterways in holiday garb, and flags fluttered from every home, in honor of the visitors. In behalf of the villagers, Aarnout Francois van Roosevelt presented Mrs. Roosevelt a 250-year-old map of Oud Vosemeer.

5000 U. S. Lawyers Are Red, Legion Says

Contempt Case

8 Hollywood Figures Face Courts Here

By the United Press

Eight Hollywood writers and directors who refused to tell Congress whether they were Communists may reopen their three-year-old legal fight to escape jail on contempt charges, their attorney said yesterday.

Lawyer Martin Popper said "new and fundamental questions" will be posed when five of the movieland figures appear in Federal courts here Thursday to learn whether they must go to prison. Two others will be in court Friday, and the fate of the eighth will be decided in his absence.

He said the "issues" were not raised in the Supreme Court review of the appeals of Film Writers Dalton Trumbo and John Howard Lawson, who already are serving one-year sentences for the same offense.

All 10 are cited for contempt for refusing to answer the Red question during a stormy communism-in-Hollywood hearing in 1947 by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Only Trumbo and Lawson were tried, however, under an agreement that the others would be bound by the outcome of their cases.

Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz said he will ask the courts to carry out the agreement by finding the eight guilty and sending them to jail.

Writers Albert Maltz, Alvah Bessie and Samuel Ornitz were to have appeared before Federal Judge David A. Pine yesterday. But Pine, who had to complete another case, first postponed the hearing until Wednesday and then put it off until Thursday.

Writers Ring Lardner, jr., and Lester Cole probably will go before Federal Judge Edward M. Curran on the same day. Writer-Producer Adrian Scott, who was to have appeared with them, is in a Hollywood hospital and his case will be decided without him.

Directors Edward Dmytryk and Hebert Biberman, originally slated to appear before Judge Richmond B. Keech Thursday, will be heard Friday instead.

By the United Press

More than 5000 lawyers are spearheading the Communist Party's "smear and fear" campaign, the national commander of the American Legion asserted yesterday.

George N. Craig, writing in the current issue of the American Legion magazine, proposed two methods of wiping out what he called the "well-organized machine of Communist legal goons . . . now operating in every section of the United States." They were:

1. "Aggressive action" by local bar associations to oust any lawyers "who deliberately try to discredit the American system of justice."

2. Establishment of a committee of attorneys in each of the Legion's 18,000 posts to give advice and protection to persons "threatened by Communists."

Violence Outdated

Craig, himself a lawyer in Brazil, Ind., said threats of bodily violence are outdated.

"Instead of using physical assaults, the party, therefore, is now resorting to something more sinister—legal beatings-up—as a means of intimidating anti-Communists," he said.

The Legion commander said these "legal beatings-up" generally take the form of threatened damage suits "to scare off opposition to the Reds' plans."

The Communist Party makes a special drive to enroll lawyers "in preference, to any other group," Craig said.

5000 Said To Be Lawyers

"Today, insiders say more than 5000 of the party's 55,000 dues-paying members are lawyers. In addition, the party can also count on the help of thousands of fellow-traveling lawyers," he asserted.

Craig said this Communist "legal steamroller" is used to "aid Communist spies and conspirators escape punishment for their admitted crimes."

"It is used to discredit the courts and the democratic code of justice," he said. "It is used to plant Communist lawyers in high government posts so that they can commit espionage in behalf of Soviet Russia."

Other major uses of the so-called Communist lawyers, Craig continued, is to make "every trial serve as a vehicle for Stalinist propaganda," and to "subvert labor unions."

He asserted there are more than 20 "legal front organizations" with high-priced attorneys "skilled in taking advantage of all loopholes in American law."

He named the two "worst" as the Civil Rights Congress, labeled subversive by the Attorney General, and the National Lawyers Guild. The guild has been called a Red front by the House Un-American Activities Committee but is not on the Attorney General's list.

that certain papers in the department would provide it. These were later submitted to the committee for its scrutiny.

The principal document that Hurley kept referring to was "Memorandum No. 40," of Service, in which, Hurley alleged, Service port from the Nationalist government of Chiang Kai-shek. But that document is now public. It was printed in the Congressional Record on October 19, 1949.

Regarding the Jaffe case, subcommittee counsel Morgan argued that a citation for contempt should be issued, because if witnesses can refuse to talk, "we might just as well discontinue congressional hearings."

Morgan admitted it was a "tough case." Though Jaffe steadfastly declined to answer all questions about his connection with Amerasia or his alleged Communist associations, he did it on grounds of fear of self-incrimination, as provided in the fifth amendment.

Hitherto, citations for contempt have been issued when witnesses invoked some other grounds for refusal to answer.

Ike Approved Insurance Plan As 1946 Chief, Kasten Says

By The Associated Press

House investigators were told yesterday that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower approved the formation of a private group insurance plan for Army officers in 1946.

There was evidence, too, that Eisenhower, who then was Chief of Staff, was invited to head the organization but turned it down because of the press of other duties.

A House Armed Services subcommittee is looking into the insurance plan as part of its investigation of alleged irregularities at the Army Finance Center at St. Louis. A House Civil Service subcommittee, which also investigated the finance center, reported the insurance business was managed for more than two years by Maj. Gen. William H. Kasten, now returied but then on active duty as Army Finance Chief.

Kasten testified at yesterday's hearing that he never devoted any of his regular duty time to the insurance organization, but did work on it at nights and during weekends.

The organization, known as the Armed Forces Mutual Benefit Association, now is a $44,300,000 concern handling $10,000 life insurance policies for 4430 officer members.

Kasten, now secretary-treasured of the association at a salary of $12,000 a year, testified the association was formed December 5, 1946, "with the knowledge and approval of the Chief of Staff."

At first it had headquarters in an Army structure near the Washington Airport, and later at finance section headquarters in the Pentagon. But Kasten said the association always paid for its stationery, postage and secretarial help, and since last year has had its offices in a Washington office building. He said none of the Army officers on the association's board of directors receives any compensation.

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM KASTEN
. . . drew insurance commissions

He said he himself began drawing a salary only after he retired from the Army and took the secretary-treasurer position.

The association arranges for group insurance through regular life insurance companies. At the start, Equitable Life Insurance Co. wrote the insurance, but later the association switched to the John Hancock and the State Mutual Insurance companies.

Lieut. Gen. Edwin Rawlings, Air Force deputy chief of staff and now president of the association, testified that $525,000 has been paid out in benefits.

The committee will go into the matter further Thursday. Kasten was instructed to return for additional questioning.

Draft Action Is Sought in Senate Today

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas, (Ill.) yesterday scheduled an overtime Senate session tonight in a race to complete action on extension of the draft law before it expires Saturday midnight.

He warned the chamber that "a tremendous amount of confusion and chaos" will result if the law is allowed to lapse. Men who have been registered over the past two years would have to reregister, he said.

Meanwhile, CIO Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey called on the Senators to defeat a draft act amendment by Senator Richard B. Russell, (D., Ga.) that would permit draftees to demand service in a segregated unit.

As chairman of the CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination, Carey sent letters to all Senators saying the amendment would "reverse the current policy" of racial equality in the armed services and make the United States "contemptible" in the eyes of many foreign nations.

Smith and Sterling Confirmed by Senate

The Senate confirmed the nomination of Nelson Lee Smith of New Hampshire for another term as a member of the Federal Power Commission. His new term will expire June 22, 1955.

The Senate also confirmed George E. Sterling of Maine for another term on the Federal Communications Commission expiring June 30, 1957.

Both actions were unanimous.

Victim of Rare Ailment Bleeds To Death Here

Despite valient medical efforts to save her, the 29-year-old wife of a State Department foreign service officer died here yesterday of a rare bleeding disorder.

She succumbed 18 hours after eight doctors performed a complete blood-change operation at George Washington University Hospital in vain efforts to "wash out" a blood constituent which prevented normal blood-clotting processes.

The dead woman was identified as Mrs. Maisie Raven, of 3221 Connecticut ave. nw., wife of E. C. Raven, of the State Department's Foreign Service Office.

Her uncontrolled bleeding started, her doctors said, about six weeks ago at the birth of her first child. Usual medical procedures which aid in bloodclot formation were unavailing, they said.

As Last Resort

As a "last ditch" measure, they explained, it was decided to change as completely as possible her unruly blood. The operation, similar to that used on newborn babies with rythroblastosis (Rh-incompatible blood), has proved successful in similar adult cases, notably in France, the doctors said.

The physicians performed the lengthy transfusion operation on Monday, with 28 pints of whole blood from the District Red Cross Blood Bank, four pints of serum albumin (the blood's fluid content), and two pints of washed cells (blood cells free of other blood constituents).

Though the patient seemed improved after the operation, her doctors said, she relapsed under continued bleeding, and died shortly before 1 p. m.

The patient, physicians attending her said, showed no past history of the bleeding condition prior to delivery of her healthy baby girl. They described the condition as caused by a "non-specific circulation anti-coagulant" in her bloodstream.

Reason for Decision

Though somewhat similar to hemophilia, the hereditary bleeding disease which attacks only males, the blood condition differed in that the unknown anti-coagulant prevents clotting even when mixed with normal donor blood, the doctors said. Largely for this reason, the complete blood-change operation was decided upon.

Because of the demand for so much blood—doctors asked up to 60 pints—State Department employes and standby blood donor groups were asked last week to donate blood to the Red Cross bank. The response was praiseworthy, blood bank officials said.

Funeral arrangements for Mrs. Craven were uncompleted last night at the DeVol Funeral Home, 2224 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Potomac Is Nearly a Cesspool, Says District Pollution Expert

Richmond, Va., June 20 (AP)—The State Water Control Board was told today that the Potomac River is approaching "cesspool conditions" in the Washington metropolitan area as a result of pollution.

Harold A. Kemp, director of sanitary engineering for the District of Columbia, said the District "is gravely concerned" with the steady deterioration of the sanitary conditions of the river.

The hearing was called by the board to determine whether a special order should be issued directing Arlington County to take such steps to abate pollution in the Potomac, Four Mile Run and other State waters as the board may consider necessary.

As a result of the hearing the water control board gave Arlington until August 15 to present a "definite proposal" for financing additional sewage treatment facilities. The board's announcement indicated it wants definite information as to the county's plans for a bond issue to pay for such facilities.

'Dirty' Picture Sale Conviction Is Upheld

The Municipal Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the conviction of news dealer Herbert Benjamin on charges of possession with intent to sell obscene pictures.

Benjamin, who operates a newsstand at 603 15th st. nw., was convicted by Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott March 10 and sentenced to pay a $200 fine or serve 90 days in jail.

In the unanimous opinion, Judge Andrew M. Hood said that "Benjamin's attorney, Joseph Forer, had presented an "interesting and able argument to the effect that obscenity has no fixed meaning, and that its meaning varies in different communities; . . . and that the pictures in question do not exceed the extremes of community tolerance existing today in Washington."

"Without attempting to describe the pictures," Judge Hood said, "we are of the opinion that they are of such a nature as to sustain a finding of guilt by any recognized standard—including the one advanced by Benjamin."

Bridges' Citizenship Is Revoked by Court

San Francisco, June 20 (AP).—Federal Judge George B. Harris today signed a formal decree revoking the United States citizenship of Harry Bridges, convicted in April of making a false statement in his 1945 naturalization proceedings.

But the Longshore leader's lawyers immediately filed notice of appeal. Judge Harris said this automatically postponed Bridges' reverting to alien status while the appeal was in the courts.

King's Nephew Sells His Land To Pay Taxes

Leeds, England, June 20 (AP).—A nephew of King George, the Earl of Harewood, started selling off one third of his ancestral estate at auction today to pay inheritance taxes.

Most of the happy buyers were his old tenants—farmers and tradespeople. One item up for sale is the village pub at Rigton, population 364.

The 27-year-old earl is eleventh in line of succession to the throne through his mother, the Princess Royal, daughter of the late King George V and sister of the reigning George VI.

The royal mother and son are keeping the ancestral seat, Harewood House.

Announcement that 7000 of his 22,000 acres would be put on the block said the earl was forced to break up his holdings by "the burden of death duties"—inheritance taxes.

Such assessments against the estate that went to the young earl when his father died in 1947 amounted to about one third of the estate's valuation of 549,120 pounds sterling—$2,196,480 at the rate of exchange then prevailing.

Fifty-one parcels sold today for the equivalent of $426,272, and 48 others will be disposed of later.

The earl had told tenants he would like to have them bid in the homes and fields they have rented.

Coffee Price Report Causes Capitol Row

ECA Intervenes

British Bid Bar Dropped By Seattle

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The city of Seattle, for the second time this year on the verge of blighting the Government's campaign to encourage European dollar export, has been hauled back into line by the Economic Cooperation Administration.

It was learned yesterday that Deputy ECA Administrator William C. Foster has persuaded the city to abandon a proposed "Buy American" ordinance, and to allow British electrical engineering firms to compete on a fair basis for municipal power installations.

Foster's persuasive powers, exercised while on a visit to Seattle last week, accomplished a major triumph for the ECA. The Seattle situation was seen in Europe as much more than a local affair; the outcome was being watched with international interest.

British Bids Rejected

The problem first arose last January, when the city rejected two bids of British companies, $200,000 below the lowest American bidders, for a $700,000 job in supplying and installing transformers for the municipal power system.

The official grounds for the rejection were that the British companies failed to meet technical specifications.

The matter leaped into the headlines, however, especially in Europe. Marshall Plan countries were skeptical of the stated reasons; they felt the action made a mockery of ECA propaganda to free trade in Europe and to encourage European nations to stimulate shipments of their gods to the United States, in order to earn dollars.

At that time, however, Foster publicly announced that the rejection of the British bids was proper and for the grounds stated; the concerns had not, in fact, met the technical requirements. Foster indicated, furthermore, that on future awards for the power plant development program, foreign bidders stood a good chance to win the contracts.

Allays Excitement

This temporarily allayed the excitement. But late last month, the ECA got word that the Seattle city council was about to enact an ordinance modeled after the Federal "Buy American" law, applicable to Government purchases.

The Seattle ordinance would provide that a "reasonable" preference be given to American bidders over foreign suppliers. "Reasonable" is usually interpreted as allowing an American firm to exceed the cost estimate of an alien company by as much as 25 percent and still win the contract.

This proposed move came on the eve of Seattle's asking for bids on the second installment of the municipal power plant program. It would have confirmed European suspicions that the January action was, indeed, deliberately discriminatory.

Foster on Spot

The proposal put Foster, personally, on a spot after his earlier reassurances to Europe. He obtained a temporary stay on the action, and last week went to Seattle for, among other things, a meeting with the city council and municipal purchasing agent.

They agreed to drop the idea of the "little Buy American" regulation, and to open bids on the new job—a project about the same size as the first, and also for transformers—to foreign as well as American suppliers.

The specifications call for American standards on certain parts frequently replaced in order that their supply may be assured regardless of transportation difficulties in the event of war. This will force British bidders to modify their usual patterns somewhat if they want the job. But Foster, who has reviewed the specifications, feels they are reasonable in all respects and within the capabilities of foreign concerns to meet on a competitive basis.

State Department officials staged a first-class row with the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday, over the wording of a subcommittee report on coffee.

Two State officials, Assistant Secretary Edward G. Miller, in charge of Inter-American Affairs, and his deputy, Edward Cate, protested that the report endangered the "Good Neighbor relations" with coffee-producing Latin American countries.

The two echoed a red-hot protest filed with Secretary of State Dean Acheson Monday by 15 coffee-growing nations. They were supported in their objections by Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), a member of the subcommittee headed by Chairman Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa.). Lucas said that he had not attended any meetings, that he had not read the report, and that he would not have signed it if he had.

Exchange Becomes Heated

At the end of a two-hour session, Gillette agreed to redraft the report. He made plain, however, that he didn't withdraw any of the allegations it contained.

At times the exchange between Gillette and Miller became heated. When Miller complained that the State Department had no chance to read the report on coffee before it was issued, Gillette sarcastically inquired if it was customary for an administrative agency to "pass upon" a report by a congressional committee.

Miller said parts of the report, dealing with the jump in raw coffee from 31 cents a pound in July to 68 cents in December, were "an affront" to coffee-producing South and Central American nations.

He said many Latin-American newspapers that had been friendly to the United States have been critical since the report was made. "Many of the attacks have been extremely bitter," he said. Although he said the State Department wasn't taking a position on the present level of coffee prices, he added that coffee has been "unfairly low" for many years.

In No Position to Criticize

Miller particularly objected to a phrase that referred to "a well-laid campaign by Brazil and Colombia to raise coffee prices." This country, he said, with its multi-billion-dollar farm price support and production control program is in no position to criticize South American countries for trying to aid their coffee growers.

Gillette responded that there would be less objection if the increased price had gone to the coffee growers. Instead, he said, it went to dealers and speculators.

Gillette pointed out that this country uses two billion pounds of coffee a year—or 85 percent of the entire production. The increase of 37 cents a pound in raw coffee between July and December, he said, cost American consumers 740 million.

"That's a lot to pay for price supports for somebody else's crop," he commented later. "That's more than potatoes cost."

Carolina Democrat Sees GOP Active In State Primary

Raleigh, N. C., June 20 (AP).—Senator Frank Graham's campaign manager said today that Republican Party leaders are backing his opponent, Willis Smith, in the North Carolina Democratic senatorial race.

Jeff D. Johnson, jr., declared that material "highly critical" of Senator Graham was being mailed to North Carolinians under the franking (free mail) privilege of Republican Representative Ralph W. Gwynn of New York.

The material, Johnson said, is made up of a leaflet containing an abstract of John Flynn's book, "The Road Ahead," and a sermon by Dr. Walter R. Courtenay, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Nashville, Tenn.

"The Republican Senatorial Committee," Johnson said, "is mailing stuff into North Carolina at the expense of the taxpayers, and since there is no contest going on between Democrats and Republicans we can only assume that the committee is interested in helping Senator Graham's opponent.

Dulles, MacArthur to Frame Plans for Separate Jap Treaty

Tokyo (Wednesday), June 21 (U.P.).—Procedure for concluding a separate Western peace treaty with Japan will be worked out in a four-day conference here between Gen. Douglas MacArthur and State Department Special Adviser John Foster Dulles, it was understood today.

The decision on concluding a separate treaty—leaving out Russia and Communist China—is up to President Truman.

But if the President decides the treaty should be written now, full details for starting it will be ready in advance on the basis of the report Dulles will make on his return to Washington.

Dulles arrives today from Seoul, Korea, and is expected to go into conference with MacAarthur at once.

Dulles told newsmen in Seoul yesterday that he and MacArthur would discuss the desirability of concluding a separate treaty and ways and means of concluding one.

It is understood they already are in agreement that a treaty should be concluded now.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, inspected naval and military installations at Yokosuka and Yokohama, south of Tokyo, today after ending their own talks with MacArthur and his aides.

Johnson and Bradley discussed mainly military aspects of the Far Eastern situation, while Dulles will discuss the political aspects.

It is understood Johnson and Bradley, in their report to the President, will hold that military and security problems should be worked out before a peace treaty is written.

2 Ships Sunk Running Cargo To Shanghai

Hongkong (Wednesday), June 21 (AP).—Two ships hit mines and sank Monday with a loss of possibly 15 lives while trying to run the Chinese Nationalist blockade of Shanghai, the British navy said today.

The navy was checking on a report that more than 50 survivors of the two ships had been picked up by one of its patrol craft.

Alarmed, three Hongkong shippers immediately canceled sailings to the Communist port. Two British ships now in Shanghai were ordered to stay there until the river approaches are cleared.

The lost ships were the 800-ton Valve, which flies the flag of Panama, and the Greek coaster Santos.

It was the first time any ships to Shanghai had hit a mine although the Nationalists warned last December the Yangtze was effectively mined.

The Valve left Hongkong June 16 with 200 tons of cargo for Shanghai. It carried a crew of 30 Chinese and a British captain.

Little was known here about the Santos. It has been running between Shanghai and Communist ports in North China for about a month.

Byrnes' Pension Issue in Carolina Governor Race

Lexington, S. C., June 20 (AP).—Federal retirement pay drawn by former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes was injected into the South Carolina Governor's race yesterday.

Lester L. Bates of Columbia, one of Byrnes' three opponents for the governorship in the Democratic primary, declared that Byrnes draws $8637.08 a year in a Federal pension. Bates said the money, no doubt, "is deserved" and "is being put to good use." But, he added, "the regrettable thing is that all our people cannot be provided for in the same proportion as the politicians provide for themselves."

Byrnes called Bates' remarks "a personal criticism," and said that the money goes into a foundation he has organized for college scholarships for needy orphans.

Song Hit Author Insolvent at Death

New York, June 20 (NYHT).—Vincent Youmans, composer of such hit songs as "Tea for Two," "Hallelujah" and "Time On My Hands," died insolvent, according to an appraisal of his estate filed in the State tax offices. Youmans died in 1946.

Listed against gross assets of $119,186 were deductions of $121,166, including funeral and administration costs of $37,122 and debts of $84,043. The debts included $66,447 representing a claim by Ann Youmans Escher, Bozman, Md., as due under a divorce decree of November 20, 1933.

St. Stefan's Crown Reported Hungary's Price for Vogeler

Vienna, June 20 (AP).—Will a king's crown be an American businessman's ransom?

Secret talks were believed under way today on Hungary's reported offer to release Robert A. Vogeler for the treasured 949-year-old crown of Hungary's sainted King Stefan I.

The holy relic of Hungarian Catholicism and symbol of national sovereignty was reported safe in American hands somewhere in Germany, probably Frankfurt, while the United States deliberates.

No one would say that Vogeler, serving a 15-year sentence for alleged spying and sabotage in Hungary, would be sprung from prison through such a curious ransom payment. But there were indications his release might be imminent.

Sources here said no demands were made for either reopening of Hungarian consulates in New York and Cleveland or for repeal of the United States ban on American travel in Hungary, as has been reported.

The crown, a gift to King Stefan from Pope Silvester II in the year 1001, contains a nail from Christ's crucifixion, according to legend. It consists of the original silver and enamel headband, which later was fitted with a diamond headpiece.

Exiled Hungarians in Germany said one or the main propaganda assets they have in resistance against the Communist government is the absence of the crown from there. By tradition, a government without it is not constitutional in Hungarian reckoning.

The crown from the Pope raised Stefan from chief of the seven tribes to King of Hungary, and with this he was granted special rights by the Church.

The crown was taken from Hungary to Germany when the Russians invaded Hungary in 1945. It was recovered by United States forces in Bavaria.

all of their taxes in the first two quarters or installments.

This will not mean that revenue actually will be increased in the long run. It merely means money will pile into the Treasury faster.

Meanwhile trouble brewed for the bill.

The top Democratic tax manager and the House Republican leader both voiced misgivings about the 433-million-dollar tax increase on big corporations, inserted in the excise-cutting bill in an effort to avoid a presidential veto.

Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee said he feels the increase "goes too far." His committee approved it Monday with 14 Democratic votes, while Doughton and 10 Republicans opposed.

But the Democratic leadership confidently predicted the House will approve the bill next week. What will happen when it reaches the Senate nobody now can tell.

House GOP Leader Martin of Massachusetts said:

"It is a mistake to increase corporation taxes at this time. It means more Government spending. It is my contention that cutting excise taxes will itself stimulate business so that there will be no revenue loss at all."

Some leaders think the pressure for excise relief is strong enough for both Senate and House to accept some corporation tax increase, if this is the only way to get the President's signature on the bill.

Two Parties Urge Britain to Join Talks

London, June 20 (NYHT).—Conservative Leader Winston Churchill and Liberal Leader Clement Davies joined tonight in urging the Labor government to participate in the Schuman coal-steel conference at Paris without committing itself irrevocably to the scheme.

They submitted a motion to Commons as the basis for the debate on the Schuman plan next Monday.

South African House Votes Communist Ban

Capetown, South Africa, June 20 (U.P.).—A bill to outlaw the Communist Party was passed 61 to 49 by the lower chamber of Parliament tonight. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Approval of the measure by the House of Assembly came shortly after disclosure that the Communist Party had decided to disband.

contained, built-in units. One could be a hospital ward, another an operatin grom, a machine shop, an operating room, a machine shop, communications center, a general's headquarters or even a tank car filled with fuel.

Commercially, the concept nas application to airline and air cargo operations in the same way that railroads and the trucking industry have developed.

While the XC-120 must be landed to detach the fuselage, the Fairchild company said yesterday that similar packs that can be dropped by parachute "will be the next step" for military use.

Many engineering problems had to be solved in building the plane. In order to make it possible for the pod to be rolled away from either end, a new type of landing gear had to be designed. The result is the first airplane with quadricycle gear. There are four dual-wheeled main gears, two on each side, which retract into the plane's engine nacelles.

Four Dual-Wheeled Gears

In addition, there are four smaller dual-wheeled gears, two on either side, on which the pods roll when detached. They can be removed and stowed in the plane when in flight.

Four ball-and-socket connections hold the pod to the Pack Plane. It can be raised and lowered by four electrical cable hoists. Inflatable rubber tubing around the top of the pod makes it possible to seal the pod tight to the plane.

Although exact performance data has not been determined, the XC-120 is expected to have about the same range as the C-119—2000 miles—and a top speed of more than 258 mph. The cargo pod has 2700 cubic feet capacity and the complete aircraft has a maximum gross take-off of about 64,000 pounds. It carries a crew of five, and is powered by two Pratt and Whitney R-4360, 3250-horsepower piston engines.

The prototype was conceived and designed by Armand J. Thieblot, Fairchild Aircraft division's chief engineer. After ground tests and Air Force inspection, the craft is expected to make its first flight in July.

Dr. George Zook, president of the American Council on Education, who was U. S. Commissioner of Education in 1933 and 1934, urged adoption of Plan 27. Dr. John Taylor, president of the University of Louisville, Louisville, Ky., likewise urged adoption of the plan. Taylor said he believed an educated citizenry is the best protection against any "ism."

John J. Corson of The Washington Post, former director of the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and the U. S. Employment Service, told the committee in a statement that "it is high time" the agency of the Federal Government concerned with the administration of health, education, welfare and security activities should be granted the full status and dignity of an executive department.

Crime Probe to Hear FCC Chief Thursday

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Senate Crime Committee will open its public hearings at 10 a. m. Thursday with Federal Communications Commission Chairman Wayne Coy as the first witness.

Other Government spokesmen will follow during the next week. Public hearings on crime and gambling activities in various parts of the Nation are not expected to begin until next month.

Coy will testify on use of communications facilities in interstate criminal activities, an announcement said. The hearing will be in room 457 of the Senate Office Building.

On Friday, the committee will hear James V. Bennett, director of the Bureau of Prisons, and Clifton C. Garner, chief Postoffice inspector. The following Wednesday, June 28, a number of Treasury officials will appear. Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover and other Justice officials also are expected to testify next week.

May Be Anticlimax

The hearings may be something of an anticlimax to those conducted by the Senate Commerce subcommittee on the race wire bill. It was at one of these hearings that McGrath said his department had made no general investigation of gambling and hence could not present "a verified up-to-date history of violations of law in the gambling field."

Shortly after testifying, however, he ordered the 93 U. S. attorneys to gather all available information on big-time underworld characters. It is expected that when he testifies before the crime committee he will tell something of what the reports show. They have not yet been turned over to the Senators.

Meanwhile, the House Interstate Commerce Committee made considerable progress at an executive session yesterday on the bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines. The bill passed the Senate unanimously and indications are it will pass the House this session.

The committee voted to adopt a new definition of "gambling device" in the bill, introduced in the Senate by Senator Johnson (D., Colo.) and in the House by Representative Preston (D., Ga.).

Gambling Device Defined

The definition says that "gambling device" means "(1) any so-called 'slot' machine or any other machine or mechanical device an essential part of which is a drum or reel, and which as a result of the application of an element of chance may deliver, or entitle the person playing or operating such machine or device to receive, any money or property; or (2) any machine or mechanical device which is designed and manufactured to operate by means of insertion of a coin, token, or similar object, and is designed and manufactured so that it may deliver, as a result of the application of an element of chance, any money or property to the person playing or operating such machine or device; or (3) subassemblies or essential parts of any such machine or mechanical device."

The language, offered by Representative Bennett (R., Mich.), would include pay-off pinball machines as well as the familiar one-arm bandits and the newer so-called console models. The committee is expected to meet in about 10 days to finish considering the bill, including redrafting a provision that a State's Governor must certify as to the legality of gambling before the machines can be sent into his State.

Probers Get Records Of Race Bet Syndicate

St. Louis, June 20 (U.P.)—The Senate Crime Committee today subpenaed records seized in a raid on the headquarters of a national betting syndicate here.

The committee also served subpenas on officers of the Pioneer News Service, which has a monopoly on distribution of racing news here.

George H. White, committee investigator, served the subpena for the voluminous betting records of C. J. Rich & Co. on a storage firm where the records have been kept since the raid on June 5.

At the same time, Internal Revenue agents impounded the records of C. J. Rich & Co. Tax agents said actions occurred at the same time only by coincidence.

In addition to officers of the Pioneer News Service, Vice President William Molasky and William Brown, president. White served subpenas for all records of the racing news service.

Molasky recently testified before the committee in Washington that he and his wife own 14,000 shares of Western Union stock, but denied there was any connection between his telegraph company holdings and his activities as a race news distributor.

C. J. Rich & Co. served as a clearing house for "lay-off" bets on sports events all over the Nation, officers said.

Supreme Court Is Socialistic, Hart Tells House Lobby Probe

Merwin K. Hart, president of the National Economic Council, yesterday said the present United States Supreme Court is "dedicated to socialism" and should be replaced with an entirely new bench.

The statement, made before the House Lobby Investigating Committee during a discussion of his organization's aims, touched off a hot procedural wrangle among committee members. Some contended that Hart's views are his own business.

Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) said that while this is usually true, the committee has an obligation to find out the aims of lobbying groups as well as how they achieve them.

Buchanan had given Hart a list of legislative goals supported by the council and asked if he wished to comment on them. Hart noted that one was entitled "removal of the present Supreme Court and barring its justices from holding judicial office."

"It is our opinion that the present Supreme Court is dedicated to socialism," he said. "The only way to remedy this is to abolish the court by constitutional amendment and set up a new court."

After Representative Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.) objected to Buchanan's procedure, Hart refrained from comment on the council's other aims.

It was brought out, however, that Hart warned subscribers to his economic council letter in January, 1948, to arm themselves with pistols and rifles to resist the Communist threat.

"We have one concrete suggestion to make to every citizen who is impressed by the potential danger," he wrote. "Let him possess himself of one or more guns, making sure they are in good working condition and that other members of his family know how to use them."

After the letter was read, Hart explained it had been written after a trip to Europe. He said it seemed to him that laws against the possession of firearms discriminate against law-abiding citizens because Communists and others ignore them.

Meantime, writer Rex Stout denied a statement made by Hart at a previous committee meeting that he once was a member of the board of editors of the "Communist magazine, The New Masses."

Plot to Kill Tampa Sheriff, 6 Others Alleged by Witness

Tampa, Fla., June 20 (AP).—A State witness in a murder conspiracy trial testified today that a plot was hatched to kill two public officials and five other men.

The witness, Jimmy San Martin, related that Hillsborough County Sheriff Hugh Culbreath had arranged for him to go to work for Arthur Velasco, one of the defendants.

San Martin said Valasco talked with him about "bumping off" State Attorney Rex Farrior, Sheriff Culbreath, Salvatore (Red) Italiano, Jimmy Lumia, Augustine (Primo) Lazzara, Augustine (Gus) Friscia and Santo Trafacante.

Arthur Velasco, his brother Roy, City Councilman P. Joseph Rodrigez and Mr. and Mrs. John Moutos are charged with conspiring to kill Sheriff Culbreath.

San Martin gave this testimony:

Sheriff Culbreath "asked me to do a favor by going to work for Arthur Velasco."

Arthur Velasco asked him to obtain a machine gun, which he did. When he asked Arthur what he was going to do with the weapon, Arthur replied that he wanted to have some men killed—"five or six at one time."

Then Velasco named the group of victims he wanted to have slain.

During the months he worked as a carpenter for Arthur Velasco the plot narrowed down to having Culbreath, Lumia, Lazzara and Italiano killed.

Arthur Velasco, continued San Martin, wanted to do away with Lumia Italiano and Lazzara because he thought they had something to do with the killing of his brother, Jimmy Velasco, gambler-politician, slain in 1948.

Joe B. Provenzano, an unemployed carpenter, was acquitted of a charge of killing Velasco.

Italiano, who had been summoned as a defense witness, departed for Italy about a month ago.

Long-Lines Dispute Agreement Reached

New York, June 20 (AP).—A wage agreement was signed today by the long-lines department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., and Division 10, CIO Communications Workers of America, a company spokesman announced. If ratified, it will affect 20,000 members in 40 States.

The spokesman said the agreement provides no general wage increase. However, he said it does provide a shortening of the wage progression schedule.

The long-lines negotiations have been one of the key wage disputes in the Nation-wide telephone labor situation. A telephone strike had been threatened, but it was postponed indefinitely last April 25.

Workers affected are long-distance operators, plant central office craftsmen, outside maintenance and construction workers and clerical workers.

Robert T. Creasey, president of Division 10, said the contract is inadequate, but "it will be ratified, despite the fact that it is not good, because of conditions at the present time."

Under the shortening of the wage-progression schedule, workers will reach top pay in the wage schedule in 6½ years, instead of the present 8 years.

The company spokesman said the contract would run one year. It will become effective as of July 5 if ratified by July 20, or effective July 12, if ratification comes by July 27.

Peace Parley Fails At World-Telegram

New York, June 20 (AP).—CIO Guildsmen and management of the strikebound World-Telegram and Sun today made a third, unsuccessful attempt to settle their dispute.

At the end of a negotiation session, Federal Mediator Francis L. Maher reported both sides are "unchanged on the issues."

The afternoon newspaper, with a circulation of more than 600,000, has been shut down a week by the strike of CIO American Newspaper Guild members. AFL mechanical unions have refused to cross the picket lines.

Main issues, over which some 400 editorial, advertising and business office employes walked out last Tuesday, are wages and a job-security plan.

'Bitter-End' Parley Called in Milk Strike

Pittsburgh, June 20 (U.P.).—Mayor David L. Lawrence summoned both sides in Pittsburgh's 12-day-old milk strike to a "bitter-end" conference tonight.

He told striking AFL milkmen and representatives of the Greater Pittsburgh Milk Dealers Association to report to his office, prepared to stay until there's a settlement.

Both sides met 45 minutes today after hearing pleas from representatives of five organizations for a quick end to the strike, which has tied up milk deliveries to three million persons.

The mayor indicated that union negotiators had submitted a new proposal, which they would recommend to the 3200 members as an agreeable settlement.

Bulgaria Accused By Yugoslavs of Border Violation

Belgrade, June 20 (AP).—Yugoslavia charged tonight that Bulgarian troops penetrated about 160 yards into Yugoslav territory four nights ago and tried to capture a frontier military post.

The official radio broadcast said the Foreign Ministry had demanded that the Bulgarian government take immediate steps to halt such incidents or "carry the consequences."

The broadcast said the incident took place at Roviste, a crossroads barracks near the junction of the Bulgarian, Yugoslav and Greek borders. It said Yugoslav soldiers forced the Bulgarians to withdraw. One Bulgarian was believed hit in the exchange of fire, the radio said.

A Yugoslav army spokesman earlier today charged that neighboring Soviet satellite states have been guilty of 802 similar border provocations in the past two years.

2 Boy Scouts Killed As Truck Turns Over

Lumberton, N. C., June 20 (AP).—A truck hauling 24 Boy Scouts home from a jamboree turned over here today and killed two and injured 10. The dead were Eustace King, 12, and David Lee Faulk, 18, both of Freeland.

Sign Painter Convicted of Impersonation

A New York sign painter peddling "secret microfilm directly out of the Kremlin," was convicted in District Court yesterday on two counts of falsely impersonating an undercover agent of the Office of Naval Intelligence.

He is Herman Axelbank, alias Carl Norman, 49.

According to FBI testimony at the trial, Axelbank came to Washington in February with the microfilm to sell it to Dr. Franz Bluecher, vice chancellor of the Federal Republic of Germany, then in this country.

He said the films showed pictures of German prisoners in Russia, and his asking price was $12,000, the FBI said.

The "secret microfilm" was actually excerpts from newsreels and cost Axelbank $175, the FBI said.

FBI agents testified that Axelbank first contacted ECA on February 7 in an effort to get an appointment to see Dr. Bluecher. He explained his lack of credentials by saying that he had just returned from such secret ONI work in Hungary that he could not carry identification, the FBI said.

Axelbank was invited to return the following day, and so was the FBI.

The jury deliberated less than two hours before convicting.

Texas Asks Court To Reconsider Negro School Case

Texas yesterday asked the Supreme Court to reconsider its decision ordering admission of a Negro to the all-white University of Texas Law School.

State Attorney General Price Daniel, in filing the petition, said the university will admit the Negro, Heman Marion Sweatt, this fall as an isdication that the petition is in good faith and not a means of delay. Yesterday was the last day for filing the rehearing request.

Since the opinion was a unanimous one in which all nine justices participated, a rehearing would be most unexpected. Daniel argued that the State's Negro law school was established after the Sweatt case was tried in the State courts asd hence the facts as to it were not in the record considered by the Supreme Court.

Prince Georges Will Get More Street Lights

The Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday announced their approval of extensive additions to the street-lighting system in communities near Washington.

In all, 15 street-lighting projects were indorsed. They were recommended by the commissioners' advisory board.

The cost to the county, including installation, maintenance and operation, will be approximately $12,000 a year, the commissioners said. The Potomac Electric Power Company will install the facilities with completion expected within six months.

Principal project is the lighting of Bladensburg rd. from 37th st., Colmar Manor, to the Peace Cross in Bladensburg. This installation is scheduled first.

Eight other street lighting projects and six intersection illuminations are included in the program.

Streets to be brightened are Addison rd. from Eastern ave. to Sheriff rd., Chapel Oaks; Addison rd. from Sheriff rd. to George N. Palmer hwy.,. Fairmont Heights; Defense hwy. from 72d ave. to Cooper rd., Landover Hills; Riverdale rd. from Edmonston rd. to Auburn ave., East Riverdale; Edmonston rd. from Riverdale rd. to Brier Ditch Bridge, East Riverdale; Riggs rd. from Ager rd. to Beechwood rd., Lewisdale; Chillum rd. from Chapel rd. to Riggs rd. and on to Eastern ave., Chillum, and Branchville rd. from U. Odds Against Twins Are Set at 92 to 1

New York, June 20 (U.P.).—Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. statisticians figured out today that the odds against the birth of twins are 92 to 1.

Triplets are born once in 9400 confinements and quadruplets once in 620,000.

Up-County

Montgomery Forms Rural Planning Unit

A five-member unpaid planning commission for Upper Montgomery County was created yesterday by the county council at its meeting in Rockville, Md.

The ordinance creating the commission provides that three of the five members must be farmers residing in the rural portion of the county outside the Metropolitan Regional District. Four members are to be appointed July 1 for 2-, 3-, 4-, and 5-year terms. The fifth member must be a member of the county council.

The new commission will draft asd hold hearings on zoning, subdivision, building inspection and similar matters now handled in the suburban area by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The jurisdiction of the commission will not include any incorporated municipalities in the area unless the municipalities request inclusion.

In other actions the council:

Awarded a contract for construction of sidewalks on Wisconsin ave. from East-West Highway to Glenbrook rd. to the low bidder, Curtin & Johnson of Bethseda. The bid was $36,310.50. Work will start Monday morning, County Manager Irving G. McNayr reported.

Abolished the Montgomery County Housing Authority and provided that the county manager, through the Department of Public Works, take over jurisdiction of the emergency veterans housing units.

Received a report from the county Liquor Control Board that net profits of $395,000 were realized in the 11 months ending May 31.

House Votes Inquiry In Campaign Spending

The House yesterday unanimously approved a resolution establishing a special committee to investigate the campaign expenditures of candidates for the House.

Jap Bid Rejected

London, June 20 (AP).—The International Wheat Council has turned down Japanese application for membership, it was disclosed today. The action was taken at a two-day session of the 31-member council that ended today.

ECA Chief Sees Peaceful Years Ahead

ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman yesterday forecast a peaceful half-century based on American productivity, European self-help and the "self-destroying" quality of dictatorships.

"We, the Western Europeans and the other free peoples of the world have it in our power to win out decisively in this struggle with the Kremlin," Hoffman told an international assembly of 4-H Club members at the Departmental Auditorium.

This power is lodged first of all, in the free world's resources, he declared.

And our power to win is enhanced because "we know that all dictatorships destroy themselves in time," the Marshall Plan chief added.

There are already cracks in Russia's ill-gotten empire, he said, and "once the Communist world starts to crack it can disintegrate very rapidly indeed."

Earlier yesterday, at a general assembly, FBI Agent George L. Carroll asked the 4-H members to help convince their communities that men must live in a framework of law in order to enjoy human rights and American liberties.

Carroll revealed that there is a growing crime rate in rural areas and that the FBI considers the general crime problem acute.

A special ceremony for 24 4-H members who recently reached voting age was held last night in the National Archives building. Knox T. Hutchinson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, made the principal speech on "The Meaning of Citizenship."

The annual club meeting will close Thursday night with an international candlelighting ceremony at the Jefferson Memorial.

Airport Hearings Are Set for June 30

House hearings will be resumed June 30 at 10 a. m. on the Senate-approved bill for a second major airport for the National Capital.

The new hearing date was announced by Representative Lindley Beckworth (D., Tex.) of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Textile Workers Strike

Milan, June 20 (AP).—An estimated 580,000 Italian extile workers struck today in a 24-hour walkout over failure of employers to sign a new work contract. Communist and anti-Communist unions are participating.

19 Testify in Edwards Trial; Motion to Acquit Is Denied

Baltimore, June 20 (AP).—Alibi witnesses took the stand today for Thomas Alexander Edwards at his second trial for the sensational Mahlan-Kline murders.

The defense started its case after the two judges, also sitting as a jury, declined a motion that they return a verdict of acquittal on grounds the State had failed to connect the 26-year-old shipyard worker with the slayings beyond a reasonable doubt.

The first of 19 witnesess for Edwards was Raymond Barr, a garageman at Pasadena, Md. He towed John Mahlan's blood-smeared car out of the bean patch where it was found near Glen Burnie on the morning of September 18, 1948.

At the first trial 17 months ago Barr testified the car's oil pan still was warm when he hauled it away.

Barr said today he now realizes he could not have touched the oil pan. He must have touched the splash guard or some other underpart, not the oil pan.

The defense had offered substantial testimony toward fixing Edwards' whereabouts at midnight and thereafter. If the car's oil pan was still warm when it was found about 6:45 the next morning, the defense contends, then someone else drove it into the bean patch.

The bodies of Mahlan, 28-year-old Glen Burnie postoffice employe, and Mary Kline, the 18-year-old redhead he had dated about once a week for a year, were found three days later in a clearing west of Annapolis, 26 miles from the bean patch. They had been shot in the head.

After the State concluded its case, the judges agreed with Defense Attorney William J. McWilliams that they should not consider any of the testimony that had to do with a confession introduced at the first trial.

Edwards first convicted and sentenced to hang, was granted a new trial after Maryland's Court of Appeals ruled that he had been unfairly induced to make the confession.

Lausche View on Taft Stuns Democrats

Columbus, Ohio, June 20 (AP).—Ohio Democrats were stunned today by a hint that their party leader—Gov. Frank J. Lausche—might vote for the Republican Senator, Robert A. Taft.

Lausche told newsmen in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., that "my general disposition would be to vote for the Democratic candidate for U. S. Senator," Joseph T. Ferguson. Then he added:

"I will vote, when I determine the issues, for the candidate I believe will serve the Nation best. If I decide that candidate is Ferguson, I will vote for him. If I believe it is Taft, I will vote for him. I will not allow my party interest to overcome my interest in my country."

In the opinion of Democratic Party workers, striving to elect all their candidates, Lausche's position amounted to sheer political heresy.

And for such words to come from their titular State leader, who is asking them to give him a third term as Governor—why it was just unthinkable.

The Lausche statement dropped like a bomb on a conference of national and State Democratic leaders in Columbus. The meeting was called for the express purpose of helping Ferguson beat Taft in the November 7 election.

When he recovered his balance, Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle, jr., commented: "Any official has the right to vote for any one he wants."

Ferguson himself, the fiery State auditor who is noted for sizzling political potshots, only declared: "I'm still going to beat Taft by 250,000 votes."

Former Governor George White, who sped Lausche on his political career by appointing him a Cleveland municipal judge in 1932, called the Governor's statement "very surprising".

Said James McElroy, Democratic chairman of Licking County (Newark):

"I am dumfounded that the leader of the party would make such a statement. I feel Lausche should support his own party without question."

Said Marvin A. Kelly, Democratic county prosecutor at Portsmouth:

"It was an unfortunate statement. I don't understand what's the matter with the man. The steelworkers here are up in arms."

Today, Taft was asked in Washington how he interpreted Lausche's White Sulphur Springs statement.

Msgr. McCormick Now Bishop

to 1931 and since 1942 has been a member of the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Msgr. McCormick, 69, has been rector of Catholic University since March, 1943. In 1948 he was reappointed rector for a five-year term. His predecessor as rector of the university, the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, was made a bishop by Pope Pius XII.

Msgr. McCormick was the first alumnus of the university to be appointed its rector. From 1935 to 1943 he was vice rector of the university and twice, in 1935-6 and 1942-3, served as acting rector.

Bishop-elect McCormick was born in Norwich, Conn., and attended public schools there. He studied at St. Joseph's Seminary, Dunwoodie, N. Y., and was ordained at Hartford in 1904.

After taking post graduate work at Catholic University in 1906 he was named superintendent of schools for the Hartford diocese.

In 1910 he returned to Catholic University as an instructor in education and a year later received his doctor of philosophy degree. In 1929, on the silver jubilee of his ordination, he was made a domestic prelate with the title of Right Rev. Monsignor by Pope Pius XI.

He holds the longest record of service among priests on the Catholic University staff. Before becoming rector he was head of the department of education and dean of the Catholic Sisters' College there.

Msgr. McCormick has written widely on educational philosophy and technique and his articles have appeared in both religious and lay journals.

Since 1921 he was been editor of the Catholic Education Review and since 1932 president of the Catholic Education Press. He has also been a member of the executive committee of the American Council of Education.

Date for his consecration will be set by the archdiocese in the near future.

Erickson Convicted

The conviction by which Frank Erickson, king of the bookmakers, has been deposed in New York is reminiscent of the trial nearly two decades earlier that removed Al Capone as an underworld czar. There is, however, this important difference. In the case of Capone, although his criminal connections were legion, the Government was forced to rely on an indictment for income tax evasion. With Erickson there was no such devious route. In the face of overwhelming evidence, presumably gathered in a raid on his headquarters last month, he pleaded guilty to 59 counts of bookmaking and one of conspiracy.

It is not to be supposed that Erickson will be put away for the maximum of 60 years that would be possible under the law; indeed, there is some talk that his sentence will be lightened because he withdrew his plea of not guilty and saved the expense of a trial. The important thing is that one of the acknowledged major figures in the twilight zone of illegal gambling and racketeering has been put out of circulation. Erickson operated in that zone for a generation, and did business of such magnitude that he was able to bank some 22 million dollars between 1933 and 1945; although he has been arrested nine times, he never before has served time. This is a measure of the kind of "respectability" with which the newer racketeers have tried to clothe themselves. Erickson is not a plug-ugly gunman of the Capone type, though his antisocial influence in encouraging disregard for law may have been nearly as bad.

In any event, the pseudo-glamour attached to the term "king of the bookmakers" has now been dispelled, and sundry leaders of allied pursuits, including Frank Costello and Joe Adonis, are doubtless quaking in their boots as a result. It would be a mistake to regard this one conviction as putting an end to the menace; but if the Kefauver crime investigating committee can make effective use of the evidence from the Erickson case, this may prove to be merely the first part of a chain-reaction.

Mission to Manila

Final agreement has been achieved on the dispatch of an American economic mission to the Philippine Islands. President Quirino has withdrawn his previous demands that the survey commission be composed of Filipinos as well as American experts. An all-American mission will go to the islands with broad instructions to make a thorough study of fiscal, financial, trade and production problems. Presumably it will make recommendations that will reflect expert judgment as to what the Philippine Republic must do to avoid the economic catastrophe toward which it is now heading. The outcome may have a decisive influence upon the future of the Far East as well as the future of the Philippines.

The role of the mission will be advisory. The United States' Ambassador, Myron M. Cowen, speaking in Manila the other day, flatly rejected the idea that this country might intervene in the internal affairs of the Philippines. There is no yearning—indeed, not the slightest wish—on this side of the Pacific to plant the American flag once more in the country to which we voluntarily gave independence. But there is a powerful desire among the American people to save the Philippine Republic from the exploiters and bunglers that have come to power in the present regime at Manila. That desire, of course, is behind the idea of sending an American mission to the Philippines. The mission will not be a new government or anything comparable to it. But if the mission is worth its salt, it will devise a program of economic rehabilitation that the Quirino regime will have to accept if it is to avoid disaster for itself and the country as a whole.

Presumably the mission will give first attention to what the Filipinos themselves can do by way of self-help. Essential aid from the United States is not likely to be overlooked, although we suspect that if any further aid is recommended or granted it will be conditioned upon the Filipinos putting their own house in order. Neither prosperity nor stability nor sound national defense can be built on a shaky foundation. For this reason it would be perilous to rely upon the proposed commission alone to arrest the drift toward chaos in the Philippines.

The blackest part of the Philippine picture is the repeated disclosure of scandal upon scandal in high governmental circles. Nothing the proposed economic mission can do in and of itself will restore the confidence that the people have lost in the Quirino regime. There had been hope that the new inquiry into corruption recently authorized would accomplish the necessary housecleaning. But this hope was based largely on the original designation of Vice President Fernando Lopez to head the investigating commission, and that "nonpolitical politician" has withdrawn because President Quirino would not allow him the authority necessary to a complete and thorough expose. Now the commission is headed by a former university president and legislator who gives little promise of getting to the bottom of the scandals. Unless the Filipino people can force their President to clean out the grafters, the hope that naturally arises out of the prospective dispatch of an American economic mission to the Philippines is likely to be thwarted.

Politics And Economics

Hopes that the President's Advisory Council would confine its activities to a dispassionate analysis of economic problems were dashed when two members of the council, Messrs. Keyserling and Clark, became propagandists for Administration policies. The President's selection of Mr. Keyserling to succeed Dr. Nourse as chairman of the council set the stamp of approval on this misconception of the proper role of an advisory group. Since the council has given a political slant to its economic views, it was only to be expected that the findings and recommendations of the joint congressional committee that examines the President's report would be influenced by politics. This has turned out to be the case—so much so, indeed, that the committee has produced two reports, one presenting the views of Democratic members, the other the opinions of Republican members.

This bipartisan split detracts greatly from the value of both reports. That is a great pity, for both contain sound advice in respect of the importance of reducing Federal spending. "Inability to vote against appropriations or vote for increased taxes needed to foot the bills this Government now incurs," the majority report said, "is a sign of weakness that the enemies of free enterprise are gleefully exploiting throughout the world. It represents the greatest single danger to freedom and national security." The majority also warned against the danger of permitting short-term prosperity to "obscure the underlying problems and weaknesses that must be corrected if maximum employment, production, and purchasing power are to be achieved and maintained in a growing economy year after year."

These and other statements make it clear that the committee could have reached an agreement on various issues concerning the public if the members had been willing to forget political differences. Instead, the majority saw fit to drag in references to the President's 12-point program, implying approval, although they did not specifically indorse any part of it. The Republican minority, on the other hand, seized the opportunity to attack the President's report and the report of the Council of Economic Advisers, dismissing them as "smooth and clever" pronouncements, but "hardly a good substitute for economic analysis and sustainable logic." The minority also criticized the President's approach to a solution of economic problems, in particular his reliance on controls and his alleged leaning toward a planned economy.

There is good material for the stump speaker in this rehash of arguments for and against Administration policies; but it serves no useful purpose in a report that should be the product of study and critical analysis. The President and his council are chiefly to blame for the failure of a promising experiment to substitute expert and unbiased discussion of economic problems and policies for partisan judgment.

Coffee Grounds

If the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee had exploded an atomic bomb instead of issuing a report on coffee prices, it scarcely could have caused more repercussion in Latin America. The report of the Gillette Subcommittee says in substance that speculation and governmental manipulation in Latin America have been largely responsible for the increase in coffee prices. This implication has caused great bitterness in the countries concerned, as evidenced by the formal protest to the State Department Monday by 14 Ambassadors and Charges d'Affaires.

Undeniably, coffee prices have jumped, and the Gillette Subcommittee had legitimate reason to inquire into the causes. Some of its observations are instructive; it is important to know, for instance, that because of the unrealistic official exchange rate in certain countries, the benefit of increased prices does not accrue to growers. Where the subcommittee has gone wrong is in its suggestion of drastic and demeaning controls, and in its provocative and insulting tone. One example will suffice. The report charges:

> Brazil doesn't give its highest medal to those who labor for lower and reasonable coffee prices for the consumer, else the chests of the members of this subcommittee would be heavy with medals instead of the batch of scurrilous radio and press comment in Brazil concerning this investigation.

It is understandable, in this context, that the Special Commission on Coffee of the Inter-American Economic and Social Council has replied heatedly. It says:

> The subcommittee's announced zeal to protect the interests of coffee consumers in the United States is no justification for rendering a report which is based upon incomplete facts, distorted interpretations, and disregard for both the economic welfare and the national pride of coffee-producing nations.

The reply insists that the rise in prices is due to normal operation of the law of supply and demand. Consumption of coffee for several years has outrun production, it says, with the difference made up from past surplus stocks which are now exhausted. The I-A ECOSOC statement points to many inconsistencies and "confiscatory" proposals in the Gillette report. Quite properly, in our opinion, it regards the Gillette recommendation that a representative of the Department of Justice sit in on meetings of the Commission on Coffee as an "aspersion on its integrity."

In such confusion it is almost impossible to tell where the truth lies. It is pretty silly, however, for a congressional body self-righteously to accuse other countries of the same price-support practices that the United States engages in on many commodities those countries must buy. Moreover, blanket charges which merely serve to raise the dander of the Latin-American nations are hardly the way to catch speculators or prevent abuses if abuses exist. Coffee is the main export crop of seven Latin-American nations, including Brazil and Colombia, and an important export of four others. It is natural, especially in view of their feeling that their aid to this country during the war has been unrequited, that they should regard such sweeping charges as an affront.

What makes the report the more irresponsible is the indication that the subcommittee is backtracking, and that not all the Senators whose names were signed to the report saw it before it was published. It is important now to place the matter in perspective, as Assistant Secretary of State Miller tried to do yesterday, and the best thing in this connection would be for the full committee to quash the report. Meanwhile Latin-American nations ought to understand that the report is not official United States policy. In short, this whole regrettable misunderstanding ought to be regarded as what it really is—a tempest in a coffeepot.

Unconfirmed Judges

Eight months have elapsed since the President gave interim appointments to Carroll O. Switzer to be a Federal judge in Iowa and Willis W. Ritter to be a Federal judge in Utah. Both men have served on the bench during that period without confirmation by the Senate. Undoubtedly both are fairly well established on the bench. What the Senate must now decide is whether these sitting judges who have made many decisions in that capacity shall be displaced for want of confirmation. As we pointed out at the time these appointments were made, such a situation is unfair to the individuals involved, to the Senate and to the public.

Some of the blame must be laid at the door of the Senate. It was necessary for subcommittees to investigate each case, and of course such investigations take time. But it does seem that matters of this sort should have been disposed of early in the session. In the case of Judge Ritter a subcommittee of three has unanimously voted for his confirmation. The hearing on Judge Switzer was concluded only last week, and the full Senate Judiciary Committee has not acted in either case. Certainly the Senate could have done better than this. But the greater fault lies in making such appointments. At the time there was a grave question as to whether Mr. Switzer could ever be confirmed, and Mr. Ritter was under serious accusations. The subcommittee has concluded that the evidence it obtained does not sustain the charges against Judge Ritter, but the public will not be in a position to form an independent judgment, for the hearings were secret.

Whatever the decision of the Senate may be, the handling of these cases certainly emphasizes the disadvantages of installing men in lifetime judgeships before their nominations have been confirmed by the Senate. Some members of the Senate may be strongly inclined to vote for the two judges because they are already on the bench. Others may vote against them in protest against the President's efforts to present the Senate with a fait accompli. In either case the issue that ought to be before the Senate—the fitness of the nominees themselves—will be strained and distorted.

Divorce Code

A move is on in the United Nations for a world covenant on divorce as a means of coping with the residence farce in divorce proceedings. Simultaneously the New York City Bar Association has started an agitation for the liberalization of the New York law and the clearing up of the American divorce law maze. Among proposals made to the United Nations Social Commission by Dr. James W. Ryan, representing the International Law Association, is one providing that no divorce would be recognized by other countries unless the husband or wife lived in the country where the suit was brought for at least one year during the 18 months preceding the filing of papers. And six months would elapse after issuance of the divorce before it would be recognized by other countries.

These proposals designed to check the trend toward quick and easy foreign divorces and to protect children of divorced couples are the result, according to Dr. Ryan, of 20 years of study by jurists and legal scholars throughout the world. They might well form a guide to the first step in straightening out the mixup in American divorce laws. For what is called "perjury in residence" is one of the chief evils of American divorce proceedings, says Richard H. Wels of the special divorce committee of the New York City Bar Association. He warns that if this continues in divorce-mill States, it may extend to the judicial blinking of eyes at perjury in any civil or criminal case that comes into court.

Child Guidance Clinic

In the controversy over Judge Cockrill's commitments no one has gone to the core of the problem: How to make good citizens out of delinquents—where to place them.

The article signed "A Teacher" on June 7 attacked the psychiatric philosophy of the social workers and vehemently declared that such children did not belong in the public schools. He was so wrong about the first—the reservations about psychology; and so right about the second. Emotionally ill children do not belong in the public schools. Neither should they be sent to a reform school. Where shall they go? That is the problem.

What we need is a school with a child guidance clinic where the child can be rehabiliated—a school equipped to deal with problem children.

"That Problem Child" by Harry T. Paxton in the Saturday Evening Post of September 24, 1949, tells how the job is done successfully at the Devereux schools in the Philadelphia suburbs.

Mentally or emotionally disturbed children can be restored to mental health.

"Terror In Washington"

Allow me to quote from article, "Terror in Washington," in the June 24 issue of Collier's: "During 1949 in Washington, D. C., 4313 men, women and children were criminally mauled or wounded with brass knuckles, bricks, pistols, shotguns, cleavers, hatchets, ice picks, knives, iron pipes and other deadly weapons. For two years straight the Capital City has run up the worst record in the Nation for aggravated assault." What a disgraceful situation!

According to Chief Barrett, one solution to this crime problem is a larger police force. He asked Congress for 546 more men, but he didn't get them (costs money you know). Again I quote, "The basic principle of uniformed police protection is to keep the cops out on the street—seeing and being seen. The very sight of a patrolman is nine tenths of the psychology of crime prevention."

Why doesn't Congress appropriate the money for this much needed larger police force? The residents of this city are powerless to do anything.

Action will probably come only when some Congressman's wife is attacked or his child abused by a pervert. Meanwhile, I'm going to keep myself and my child behind locked doors.

Your June 18 article, "Terror in Washington," a reprint from Collier's, is certainly a fine device to help awaken the citizens of this city to the conditions which exist and which need correcting. I do hope you will continue to help arouse our public before a more difficult situation occurs. Certainly there is much need for improvement.

Paying For War

If our Government in peacetime does not stop spending more money than it receives in income, it is bound to bring on the same kind of an inflation that has completely wrecked the governments of China and of Hungary, and which brought to pass the French Revolution and the Reign of Terror.

The aftermath of World Wars No. I and No. II, with all its destruction and violence and the consequent results of demoralization, has entailed economic and spiritual maladjustments almost as serious as the wars themselves. Thus a future generation has to bear a double burden.

If the Government leaders and financiers comprehended the vital truth of the evil effects in the aftermath of war, and would be required to provide for the immediate cost of a war, instead of saddling it off on a future generation, the tinderbox of the war-magazine would not be touched off so quickly. As wars are now conducted the victors suffer more than the vanquished, in the aftermath. Few wars would ever get started if the instigators had to provide the means to finance the war instead of borrowing money and having a future generation pay the debt.

"Security In Japan"

In his recent dispatch from Washington to the Tokyo Shimbun, Mr. Watanabe, their correspondent, quoted at length from a letter on opposition to an early peace treaty by "Realist" together with The Washington Post's editorial of May 27—"Security In Japan."

"Realist" states: "Is Japan ready for democratic self-government? I doubt whether any trained unbiased observer will agree that she is." I heartily agree with this assertion. Unlike democracy in the United States, Japan's is what I call a "hand-out" democracy. For example, the new constitution can be called the brain-child of General MacArthur. With good grace the Japanese leaders adopted this gift from the victorious general. It is highly problematical, therefore, whether we can feel at home with "democratic self-government" which is a foreign product in the short span of three years.

"If a peace treaty now means complete withdrawal from our tutelage of the Japanese in democratic self-government," "Realist" states, "we can expect a revival of totalitarianism in some form." I have some apprehension on this point myself. Nevertheless, I disagree with "Realist" when he advances this as a deterrent factor to the conclusion of the long overdue peace treaty. A provision could be inserted into the treaty to provide for it.

The claim that "Japan could become the arsenal of the commies' dream of world conquest" is preposterous. How frail Japan was is the lesson we gleaned from the last war.

As long as Japan had her military power intact, she could not only preserve her own security but also maintain a general peace in East Asia. With the total elimination of Japan as such, however, history ordained the United States to stand vis a vis Soviet Russia with an ever-growing accumulation of vital questions between them to be solved. In a sense these are the legacy left of Japan's defeat.

Had this significance been appreciated, a substitute for the old method of "stabilization" should have been devised and put into operation simultaneously, if not prior, with the total demobilization of Japanese military power. Instead, with her feet in Japanese shoes, as it were, the United States appeared to have forgotten to replace "Japan as a stabilizing factor."

Japan is desirous of resuming her trade with all countries without restriction or discrimination. Under the peace treaty we can have trade relationships with all. After nearly five years since the war, we now have only five overseas agencies in America, opened recently. At present, 30 percent of Japan's foreign trade is conducted in Japanese hands, while 70 percent is in foreign hands in which America has a lion's share. How can we achieve reconstruction without the peace treaty which gives Japan freedom in international trade?

It is true, as you say in your editorial, that in the discussion of the Japanese peace treaty "American security has primacy." What is the best policy for achieving this? Although recognizing the existence of propaganda from certain quarters, particularly from the Communist Party in Japan, I am not inclined to think in the last analysis that "if an attempt is made to force leading strings upon Japan, then the legacy might be resentment and noncooperation and a leftward slant in Japan." The editorial suggests that "the object, it seems to us, is to try to get bases voluntarily . . . This is the nice problem confronting our (American) diplomacy—how to win security without forcing it and so, alienating Japanese sentiment." For this purpose, nothing, in my opinion, is more imperative for the United States than to conclude the peace treaty without further delay.

It has been frequently reported that General MacArthur made his recommendation to the American Government to conclude the treaty in March, 1947. Since then, three years' hesitancy on the part of the United States has brought about a general disintegration in the situation of East Asia. What does she expect from further procrastination? Is there any possibility of striking a better bargain with Soviet Russia by waiting three more years?

You say: "Our diplomacy . . . sometimes rode roughshod over the Japanese when they encountered difficulties in their relations with China. There was a disposition to think of ourselves as somehow endowed by Providence to be the special protector and benefactor of China. This corresponded neither with the facts of nature nor the facts of economics."

This sane retrospection is a reminder of British Minister Lyttelton's pithy remark of "the travesty of history" made when the war was at its height in 1943 and the last work Roosevelt and the Coming of War, of the late Dr. Charles A. Beard, my professor at Columbia. This introspection generated in the American mind, although much belated, will have a salutary effect upon the making of the peace treaty, and the new American-Japanese relationship that will be ushered in. Both America and Japan have to learn to bury the hatchet of the past and prepare ourselves for whatever eventualities the future unfolds before us.

Frontier Spirit In New Guise

By Malvina Lindsay

Summer Culture Treks

YOU HAD begun to sense that somethng was happening to tourists. Telephone calls from travelers on the wing were often more crisp, hurried, yes and alert than formerly. Here was somebody doing Washington in two days (no, not a single minute for luncheon or tea) in order to get on to New England, where summer school, with sessions on dunes, would be combined with worship at historic shrines.

Here was somebody else on the way to Aspen, Colo., to attend the Institute for Humanistic Studies while enjoying the grandeur of the Rockies. Still another caller was covering everything of historic interest from St. Augustine to the Plymouth Rock before proceeding to a music festival in the Berkshires.

Then there were the families taking children on "geography tours." You were exhausted by the mere listing of the itineraries. But the adults were as excited as the children. What's more, you found picture post cards arriving from relatives and friends headed West on similar "geography tours," or on culture treks of their own.

Now you find you have been sitting in on a trend, a sort of summer gold rush for self-improvement. The Chautauqua spirit is in the air, and even resort hotel owners are reported offering lecture courses, dramatic productions, concerts in addition to their pageants of bathing beauties or vistas of mountains.

YOU THINK of the estimated 60 million Americans who will be on the move this summer, including probably 400,000 seeing western Europe or studying there. Ten thousand young Americans will be in European summer schools, institutes, seminars, work camps, the Institute of International Education estimates.

Then there is the unprecedented rush already under way on the 28 national parks and the 158 historic sites and recreation areas under Federal supervision. Park officials expect 35 million visitors.

You think of the throngs who will be eagerly viewing the operations of the United Nations (24,000 last month), and of Washington; of those who will be reliving the Nation's past at Williamsburg, Monticello, the Indian villages of New Mexico.

Most of these vacationists will be out for good times, but just the same they will conscientiously "take in" everything of historic or geographical interest, and remember or record all the statistics. That is the traditional American way of touring. And now here is this growing interest in getting something beyond facts. Also this emphasis on having Junior improve each shining hour of travel.

You think of the excitement of bright-eyed youngsters who find the places mentioned in their geography and history books becoming realities, and the Nation's great taking on more human warmth at their former homes or their shrines.

YOU ALSO think of the great aid given these family parties and other tourists by those American "Baedekers", the State guides prepared by the Federal Writers Project during the 1930s. Every time you consult one of these accurate, interesting and effectively written guides you pay mental tribute to the anonymous authors who gave their best to what some crude minds called "boondoggling."

Then there are the adult tourists seeking something more than views of American topography, seeking also to drink of their Nation's cultural springs. Yes, the American tourist of the cartoon, who comes home equipped only with comparative statistics of hotels, barbecue stands, heights of monuments and mountains, is becoming a little passe.

There are the 132 New England colleges offering special summer courses to attract vacationists; the similar courses in many other resort areas; classes and conferences on beaches, in mountain valleys; vacation groups conducting summer theaters; Americans, young and old, going to lectures on shipboard or in European castles.

You realize with a deep sense of pride that this is another vigorous manifestation of the American spirit. For it is rooted in the same restless energy and eager reaching out toward something beyond that kept men and women on the march toward America's physical frontiers. You suddenly feel much more hopeful about tomorrow.

Blow To Propaganda

The Supreme Court has ruled against discrimination in schools and universities, torn down screens in dining cars between tables. A Federal court has agreed to hear a suit of a Negro who wishes to enjoy a public golf course, and libraries have opened their doors wide. A policeman has been promoted to lieutenancy and a legislator to an assistant attorney. All this in the South!

No longer can Russia point her red finger at our foreign policy and say to the Negro: "America does not mean you well; how can she when its citizens will not participate equally with you in its democracy? Look to us for your salvation, we are your friends, and it is we who accept you on terms of human equality!"

With one stroke we have knocked the props from under Russia's vast machine of propaganda and turned the tides of the masses in our favor . . . so long overdue.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Europe 1950: Victory?

THE CHOICE now confronting the United States and the Western world is a choice between total defeat in the cold war, and something very close to final victory. There is fearful danger of defeat, because the defenses of the West are not being rebuilt while the Soviet Union rearms. Because the danger is so great, this point has been emphasized in this final summing up of the experiences of a long journey abroad.

On the other hand, however, there is every reason why we in America should feel encouraged and even optimistic about the future, provided we have the guts and good sense to launch the needed defense effort without further delay. This is the other side of the medal, which must also be held in view.

The justification for this optimism is, very simply, what we have already accomplished. It is too easy, nowadays, not to notice how far we have come already. It is too easy to forget the summer of 1947, when crises of misery threatened every nation in western Europe; when no western European government possessed more than the shadow of authority; when it was overwhelmingly probable that most of the Continent would be in Communist hands with 12 to 18 months.

This was another moment when we skirted the perilous brink of total defeat in the cold war. But in 1947, we acted in time. The interim aid bill and the Marshall Plan gave the Europeans the necessary margin, the necessary self-confidence, to rebuild their war-shattered economies. Now, in the summer of 1950, we can look around us, and be sure that we have scored a brilliant success.

ANYONE would be a fool to say, of course, that the Marshall Plan has produced final solutions of Europe's ancient problems. There are still internal political-economic problems of the utmost gravity, particularly in western Germany and Italy. There is also the problem of the pattern of the new Europe, which is customarily but badly conveyed in the phrase, "European integration." The one great mistake that was made at the launching of the Marshall Plan was to let people hope for overnight solutions of Europe's immense, complex and immemorial problems.

The notion was silly from the first. We should not carp and complain because a federal Europe has not miraculously sprung into being. Instead, we should be delighted that the broad tendency is now good, as is shown by the superb French initiative of the Schuman-Monnet plan for a new Franco-German relationship.

It is even more important, furthermore, that life has now come back to this western Europe that was so close to death in 1947. Indeed, to say that life has come back is the only way to describe the astonishing change, which any traveler finds in any European country, even including the worst afflicted, Austria and Germany.

As with any patient returning to health, scores of symptoms, little and big, all indicate the alteration. Everything is different, from the production indices to the conversation of the people in the open-air cafes. In short, the first part of the job in Europe has been done, thus far, in a better way than could have been hoped.

THIS IS doubly important. For this return of life in western Europe, made possible by our first really big effort, should give us the self-confidence for the next big effort that is now demanded. And this return of life equally will permit our European partners and allies to bear their share of the burden in this next big effort of defense.

We can, of course, fail to make the effort. Or we can even forget that our allies overseas are only convalescent, and destroy our whole success by pushing onto them defense burdens more heavy than they are yet ready to bear. Either way, disaster lies. On the other hand, if we now meet this challenge of the defense problem, the gain will not be merely negative and protective.

In truth, one of the two or three really fundamental political facts in Europe today—and here eastern Europe may be included—is the vast influence of fear of the Kremlin's military power. Because of this fear, the western European Communists, and their colleagues in the satellite areas, expect the Kremlin to win in the end. Because of this fear, the Kremlin still has the advantage of a certain bandwagon psychology, even although this has been greatly diminished by the Marshall Plan's success.

Remove the fear. Create a bandwagon psychology about the success of the West. The Kremlin will then experience the worst of all misfortunes for imperialist totalitarians—a heavy check of momentum. One cannot now foretell exactly how this kind of check of momentum would finish off the western European Communist parties, opening the way for the creation of a healthy, independent left-wing movement. One cannot now foretell exactly how this check of momentum would influence the internal situation in the satellite area, preparing for the eventual retreat of Russia from Europe.

But one can be certain that this broad kind of development will occur, if the Kremlin's momentum is indeed checked, and the new situation is then wisely exploited. And if these things happen, the cold war will have been pretty well won.

Genocide Convention

By Marquis Childs

Reasons to Outlaw Mass Murder

ONE OF the characteristics of the strange time in which we live is an almost pathetic belief in the power of law to change the nature of human society. Particularly here in America we are at times inclined to endow the mere fact of the adoption of a law with a kind of magic.

Childs

This was most forcibly illustrated, of course, in the prohibition law of the '20's. We are still suffering from the aftermath of that "noble experiment" in eradicating ancient human habit by a prescription written down in the law books. Gambling is another ancient habit that breaks through the barrier of law with frequent, violent and destructive consequences.

In the end of the session jam now looming up as Congress looks hopefully toward getting away, one issue may come in for a lot of debate. That is the treaty the Senate has been asked to ratify incorporating the Genocide Convention already approved by the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Genocide, by dictionary definition, is the use of deliberate, systematic measures toward the extermination of a racial, political or cultural group. The U.N. convention outlawing genocide grows out of the conviction that the racial crimes committed by the Nazis against whole peoples can be prevented by a statute having the sanction of the U.N. behind it.

THOSE crimes were so monstrous, so deliberate, so scientifically carried out that it was hard for the civilized world to take in what has happened. In his moving novel The Wall John Hersey has tried to show what these mass crimes meant to individuals caught in the horror of scientific liquidation.

But the Genocide Convention, intended to outlaw this horror, has produced opposition and doubt. The American Bar Association has taken a stand against it in the belief that it goes so far as to supersede our own laws here at home.

Similar opposition has developed in the South. The New Orleans States recently devoted a series of editorials to showing why the Genocide Convention should not be adopted. In these detailed and carefully analytical articles it was pointed out that provisions of the convention go so far as to make it conceivable that an American citizen might be ordered before an international court and convicted of a "crime" that he could not, or would not be punished for, in the courts of his own State.

For example, one of the acts forbidden under the convention is "causing serious bodily or mental harm to members" of a national, ethnical, racial or religious group as such. This is so broad, the editorials point out, as to infringe on certain basic American guarantees, such as the right of free speech; putting in the hands of an international tribunal the right to determine whether American citizens should, or should not, continue to live under these guarantees.

THE GENOCIDE Convention may go too far. There are those who would like to add clarifying language to the resolution ratifying the treaty, in order to make sure that extreme interpretation is not intended.

But if the extremes are modified, it seems to me that mass murder should be outlawed by the only international body with authority to take such a step—the United Nations. The Genocide Convention ratified by the members of the U. N. would, I believe, have the sanction of the great mass of peoples everywhere.

The objection is raised that such a statute cannot be adequately enforced, and particularly behind the Iron Curtain where slave labor camps, and the terrible cruelty of enforced migration of peoples are in the Nazi pattern. "But it will, nevertheless be a beginning and an aspiration.

Law has always represented aspiration as well as reality. Laws forbidding murder of one individual by another individual evolved out of primitive society, when the sanction against murder grew strong enough among enough people. Law and order have been a slow and painstaking growth, and so inevitably will they be on the international level.

Next month the International Labor Office of the United Nations is expected, under the urging of the American Federation of Labor, to initiate an investigation into Russia's slave labor camps. Some of the gruesome facts of the harsh slavery, to which millions are subjected, will be spread before the world, provided this inquiry is earnestly carried out. It may not be possible to punish those who are guilty of such mass crimes. But against the background of a treaty ratified by most of the nations they will be found guilty before the bar of world opinion.

A Communication

Decay In Formosa—Chiang's Masquerade

WHAT YOU have been saying about Formosa has interested me very much, and I think, in view of the censorship, I ought to spell out your conclusions, even though I must use a pen name for that purpose.

It is well not to take seriously the promises of high ranking leaders in the Nationalist government in pledging their lives for the defense of Formosa. Their jittery manner about their insecurity is clearly visible. Most recently a Norwegian ship was intercepted by the Nationalist navy off of Macao, on which 96 high-ranking officials and their families who were leaving Formosa without "permits" were arrested. None of the names has been officially disclosed as yet. However, the pressure of growing indignation in connection with this arrest has reached the degree of open revolt. In fear of such an event, the Nationalist government has promulgated a new law, effective June 1, whereby anyone who desires to leave Formosa must put up a bond equivalent to $875 (U.S.) as a guarantee for his return to the island.

The new law was based on the principle that those who are in power in the present Nationalist government would have no difficulty in paying such an amount of money. Besides, with this consideration, only the men in power could cause real trouble to the present Nationalist outfit. This new law has evidently given real relief to those who are really in power, but not to those who are also "in power" as far as the government structure is concerned.

The most conspicuous unit is the so-called Legislative Yuan —the law-making unit. In the Western democratic sense of the term, the law-making unit is the highest controlling unit representing the opinions of the majority of the people in the country; but this is definitely not the same in the Chinese sense of the term—the man really in power is the man who holds the gun and keeps the key to the treasury!

THOSE poor Chinese lawmakers have been worrying to death ever since the possibility of holding Formosa has begun to vanish. They are pitifully powerless and penniless. This does not mean they are perfect in their personal integrity; the only regret they have is they did not have a chance. The only weapon they could apply was to stir up a scathing verbal attack in groups on Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in connection with the status of most of his relatives. The main targets are T. V. Soong and H. H. Kung. These attacks were released intentionally into the hands of the American correspondents, with the hope that the news would reach the ears of the American people. Then, the Americans would strongly influence the policy of this country toward China.

The news was published on June 9 in all the newspapers, and heard on all the radio networks, that T. V. Soong had resigned as a member of the Kuomintang, in order to parry the attacks on the Generalissimo launched by the law-makers. The ground for the resignation was that T. V. Soong is one of the acting leaders of the Kuomintang, and thus should be ordered to return to Formosa immediately. This is the primary sign of the start of pressure within the government in Formosa, due to fear, dissension, and selfishness.

IT IS entirely untrue—to underline your point—that the family ties between Chiang and Soong and Chiang and Kung are loosening. On the contrary, the extensive exchanges of cables among them, and the personal envoys traveling back and forth incessantly, between United States and Formosa, despite detours through other countries, are clearly shown in the records of the Department of State. To top it all, the perfect coordination of T. V. Soong's resignation gives more solid evidence of their closer connections.

Anyhow, one thing is certain, and that is, Formosa will not be defended by the Nationalists, even if Chiang keeps his word to die in Formosa, this firm and common belief is based on the fact that the one who really holds the military power of the combined forces in Formosa prearranged everything for himself and his family in Hongkong and the United States years ago, and the bunch of people who actually hold the keys to the Nationalist funds have long been here and other places to meet the requirements of those who escape from Formosa.

If the United States Government considers that Formosa is of strategic value for the security of this country, in the event of war with Russia, then the only way to save Formosa is by initiating immediate action to put Formosa under the direction of the United Nations before the peace treaty with Japan is signed.

Secrest Slated To Take Post As R.M.A. Head

By S. Oliver Goodman

James D. Secrest will become general manager and secretary of the Radio Manufacturers Association on August 1, succeeding Boyd Geddes, who has announced his retirement.

Secrest

At the same time, because of the growing importance of television, the R. M. A. has decided to change its name to Radio - Television Manufacturers Association. The group's headquarters are at 1317 F st., nw.

Secrest, a former reporter for The Washington Post, has been director of public relations for the R. M. A. for the past five years. Previously, he was in charge of publicity and advertising for the Pulpwood Consuming Industries from 1943 to 1945.

From 1941 to 1943, Secrest helped organize and directed 60 domestic field offices of the Office of War Information. He came to Washington four years after graduation from Duke University and joined the news staff of the Washington Post. Efforts to insure an expanding economy, Jones said, give the "sole valid justification for the theory of limitation of hours of work which has become a part of our way of life."

Alice Demands F. O. B. Postage To Stop Frank Discrimination

By J. A. Livingston

"I should think," said Alice, "that Sen. Myers, of Pennsylvania, would feel discriminated against. He ought to demand an investigation of Postmaster General Donaldson. Donaldson does a lot more for Sen. Knowland, a Republican of California, than for Myers, a Democratic bigwag. And for the same price!

"When Myers sends a letter to Philadelphia or Harrisburg, a distance of 150 miles from Washington, he pays just as much as Knowland pays for sending a letter 3,000 miles to San Francisco or Los Angeles. Knowland gets 20 times as much mileage as Myers. Myers ought to insist that postage rates be put on a strict f.o.b. pricing system. That would fix Knowland."

Livingston

"But Alice," protested the Mad Hatter, "Myers and Knowland get mail service from Washington free. If they both pay nothing in the first place, how can Myers be discriminated against?"

"Because gratis means more to Knowland than to Myers," responded Alice. "It's clearly frank discrimination. Consider the plight of Sen. Byrd, from Virginia. Or Sen. Tydings, of Maryland. They're right next door to Postmaster General Donaldson. The closer they are to him, the less their privilege's worth."

"SILENCE, silence," commanded the Red Queen, "the notion is preposterous. Sen. Myers is against f.o.b. pricing. He voted for the steel basing point bill. If you applied f.o.b. pricing to the post office, you'd have to do it to Arrow shirts, Hershey bars, cigarettes, chewing gum, newspapers—anything sold at a standard price."

"A proper idea," intervened the Walrus. "We'll come to it. The youngster on a Sunday school picnic in Hershey, Pa., has to pay the same price for a nickel Hershey bar as a youngster on a Sunday school picnic in New York City or Washington, D. C. The Hershey boy pays phantom freight for his Hershey."

"Yes," chimed in Alice, "and the business man who mails a local letter pays phantom freight, since another business man who sends a letter a thousand miles aways pays only 3 cents."

"If delivered pricing is good enough for a Hershey bar or a letter, why isn't it good enough for steel?" asked the White Queen.

"Because," answered Alice, "steel company lawyers say the Supreme Court held in the cement case that sympathetic basing-point pricing is discriminatory and illegal."

"Goodness, gracious," said the White Queen. "That explains everything."

"FOOSH," said the Mad Hatter. "There's no discrimination at all. Under a delivered pricing system, the nearby customer pays just as much as the faraway customer. That compensates the faraway customer for having the good sense to stay away from the steel plant.

"Under the f.o.b. pricing system, the nearby customer pays the same price as the faraway customer but the faraway customer has to pay for the long freight haul. That's what f.o.b. means—free on board. That compensates the nearby customer for the smoke nuisance of being near a steel plant. Under either system, customers pay the same price and that's nondiscrimination."

"But the consequences are different," protested Alice.

"Of course," said the Mad Hatter. "That's because we have a two-platoon price system and neither the Supreme Court, the Federal Trade Commission, nor President Truman is sure which one's right. If one system ever turns out to be wrong, we shift to the other system, just like in football at Michigan."

THE WHITE QUEEN was wringing her hands. "It's getting beyond me, far beyond me," she declared petulantly. "What's the steel industry going to do now?"

"What it has been doing," said the Mad Hatter cryptically. "It's in a sellers' market. So it lets the buyer pay the freight."

"But what will happen when we get in a buyers' market?" the White Queen asked.

"The steel companies will ship steel on a delivered basis and absorb freight. Competition will force that."

"How will they justify it—in the face of the Supreme Court?"

"The same lawyers which now say they can't absorb freight will suddenly discover they can absorb freight," shouted the Red Queen.

"Well, then, why did President Truman veto the basing point bill?" asked the White Queen.

The Red Queen, Alice, the Mad Hatter, the Walrus said in unison: "Because he didn't wish to upset the confusion."

Farm Finance Bill Bogged on Import Clause

The House bogged down yesterday in debate over the impact of a compromise farm financing bill on the reciprocal trade program and was forced to postpone final action.

The measure would permit the Commodity Credit Corporation to borrow an additional two billion dollars from the Treasury to finance its widespread farm price support programs. It would bring the agency's total credit authority to $6,750,000,000.

Seven Republican members objected to a provision drafted by a joint conference committee that would authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to request a Tariff Commission investigation if he believes foreign farm imports are hurting the farm program.

If his suspicions were verified, the President could levy an import fee up to 50 percent of the value of the imported crops or cut import quotas by as much as 50 percent.

Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking Committee, said both the State and Agriculture Departments had approved the bill. He said it would hurt neither the farm program nor the Trade Act as long as neither interfered seriously with the other.

Keyserling View

Trade Gains At Postwar Peak Point

By The Associated Press

President Truman's top economic adviser yesterday said the Nation is "at the peak point of post-war real prosperity and the outlook for the rest of the year is good.

Chairman Leon H. Keyserling of the Council of Economic Advisers gave that summary to reporters after a White House call.

In the second quarter of 1950, he said, the country reached the "all-time peak in Peacetime prosperity when measured by the productive output and the overall economic activity."

Keyserling and John D. Clark, another member of the commission, conferred with President Truman on the economic outlook.

Keyserling said it was the first of a series of talks they will have with the President while putting into final shape a mid-year economic review. The president will submit the review to Congress early in July along with his own mid-year economic report.

The third member of the council is Roy Blough of the University of Chicago. He is finishing up his work with the university and has not yet begun his duties with the economic advisers.

Keyserling said a recession that began last July had caused concern, but that the council's forecast that strong underlying economic factors would revive business activity was borne out.

"The business recovery was prompt, vigorous and sustained," he said.

Asked if he thought there was a likelihood of further inflation, he said that he did not regard as serious the upward trend in some prices.

Boom Blamed For Shortage Of Newsprint

By The Associated Press

The cause of the newsprint shortage is the booming demand for reading matter, while the possible cure, Congress was told yesterday, is the building of a bigger United States newsprint industry.

Senator Dworshak (R., Idaho) told a House monopoly investigating committee he considers it "unsound and uneconomic" for American newspapers to rely on foreign firms—chiefly Canadian—for most of their paper supply.

Dworshak agreed with some of the committee members that domestic producers might be given the incentive to expand if Canadian newsprint were subjected to a tariff. It has been duty-free for 37 years.

Most witnesses reported no signs of a monopolistic effort to control output and thus keep prices high. Economist John A. Guthrie of Washington State College said such efforts in the past usually have been "unsuccessful".

Greater advertising and wider reading, both the result of thriving business, have boosted the demand for newsprint beyond expectations, the professor said. He added:

"The current shortage, therefore, is largely a function of our prosperity."

The record of prices and profits in newsprint, Guthrie reported, does not "bear out the charge that producers have, over the years, exercised an undue amount of monopoly power."

"Because of the very nature of the newsprint industry, fewness of firms is not undesirable, but rather it contributes to the achievement of greater efficiency and stability and lower costs and prices."

The failure of "infrequent" attempts to limit output and boost prices, Guthrie said, can be attributed "primarily to the vigilance of newspaper publishers in detecting and condemning" such practices. However, the mill price of newsprint has risen from $45 to $100 a ton since 1941.

Acheson Receives Governors' Support

Governors gathered about him in a square.

Sitting just behind him were Philip C. Jessup, Ambassador-at-outlining the grim situation in the the Secretary and his aides finished Large, who was one of Senator McCarthy's targets; former Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, a Republican, now special adviser to the Secretary, and Carl Humelsine, a State Department security officer.

Acheson, who has been criticized for a lack of warmth, talked in an easy-going fashion, sprinkling his language with idiomate phrases. Once he told a story about the late C. Harry Covington, his law partner, and a "red-hot" oyster, and evoked a roar of laughter.

Clean, Loyal and Honest

In defending the State Department against charges of Communist infiltration, he said:

"We are satisfied, as far as anybody can be in this imperfect world, that we have a good, clean loyal and honest outfit.

"The only thing I worry about is whether I have enough brains and strength to be worthy of these people. I have no doubt about them"

This was a public session, and lasted about one hour and 15 minutes. Then reporters, cameramen, and spectators were asked to leave, the doors were locked and Acheson underwent a running fire of questions that lasted for about two hours and 15 minutes.

Secretary Appears Happy

Emerging from the auditorium, Acheson and many of the Governors repaired to the "Old White Club" for refreshments. The No. 1 Cabinet officer appeared to be in a friendly and happy mood. He sat a table with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Gov. Earl Warrent of California, Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland, Ambassador-at-Large Jessup and others.

Governor Lane, who presided at the round table on foreign affairs, made this statement to reporters:

"The Governors feel a definite confidence in the State Department and in its leadership. It was the frankest discussion of the existing situation they ever heard. It is their desire to be of help in the unification of public opinion that is so sorely needed today."

Governor Dewey said it was "very informative" conference that "covered a lot of ground."

Governor Warren said it was "a wholesome experience" to have the Secretary of State present his problems to the Governors and then submit himself to their questions.

Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey said the conference was "constructive, helpful and enlightening." The result would be, he thought, an increased confidence in the State Department.

Some details of the off-the-record session leaked out.

Gov. Luther W. Youngdahl of Minnesota, it was reported, asked Acheson a question that apparently was inspired by the Secretary's famous remark that he would not turn his back on Alger Hiss. He asked Acheson if it was true that he said, after Hiss' conviction, that he did not think Hiss was a Communist.

Acheson, it was reported, told Youngdahl that this was not true.

Gov. J. Bracken Lee of Utah wanted to know what the State Department was doing about McCarthy's charges that it is infested with Communists; that is, what it is doing to restore public confidence in the department.

Acheson had Security Officer Humelsine go into some detail in describing how the department's loyalty program works.

There was talk, too, of President Truman's plan to add three distinguished Americans to the Loyalty Review Board and have them look into the files of McCarthy's 81 cases.

Jessup Tells of Far East

Dr. Jessup told the Governors of his tour of the Far East and of what he learned about the Communist drive in that part of the world.

In the earlier public session, Secretary Acheson made an introductory talk in which he told what the United States is doing under the Point Four program.

Afterward, Governor Lane said he would answer "appropriate questions within the limits of diplomatic propriety." Lane then asked one himself, saying:

"You appear to have every confidence in the Department of State and its personnel. Will you comment, on the basis for that confidence?"

Acheson replied that his confidence was the same that Governors had in their own organizations.

"I've grown up in the Department of State, and I know it," he said. "I've been a high official of the department longer than any of you have been Governors. I went into the department 10 years ago, and, with a short interruption, I've been there ever since.

"I don't want to give the impression," he continued, smiling, "that I shined the spittoons and grew into them. In fact, I started as an Assistant Secretary of State."

Acheson showed that he had been well briefed before he came to White Sulphur Springs. After saying that the State Department had 20,000 employes, he pointed out that Governor Warren had two and a half times as many in California and Governor Dewey had three and a half times as many in New York.

"I don't know all of those 20,000," he said. "I do know most of the responsible officers in Washington and in the field . . . I've sent people to every dangerous part of the world, and I've never had a squawk. I've sent people to countries behind the Iron Curtain where they are treated like criminals . . . I know it is a good, courageous, intelligent outfit.

"The management is of the first class," Acheson said, and went on to list various officials. "Dr. Jessup is a man I've known for over 25 years. He has worked at considerable sacrifice of his own time and desires . . . One of the few good things about the recent criticism of the department is this: Dr. Jessup was about to quit, and it made him so mad, he said he'd be doggoned if he would; and so we've got him hooked for good."

He noted that Willard Thorp, the department's economic expert, once was associated with Dun & Bradstreet, and he observed that this was hardly "an outstanding Communist Front organization."

He told how, at the end of World War II, the State Department took over 3000 employes of the Office of War Information and the Office of Strategic Services. Some of these people, he said, didn't belong in the department, and he related how Secretary Byrnes, and later Secretary Marshall, realized that it was necessary to set up screening machinery.

Careful of Morale

He said the department went about it in a quiet, sensible way, aiming to keep up morale and efficiency. He told of the work done in this connection by Assistant Secretary John Peurifoy and Humelsine.

"It always seemed extraordinary to me," Acheson said, "that there was anybody left when these brothers got through with them."

At this point, Acheson made the statement that the State Department was a good, clean and loyal outfit.

Governor Lee of Utah asked Acheson if the Governors couldn't help if they curtailed their appeals for Federal aid and so made more money available for the State Department.

Answers With Story.

Acheson waited a while before answering, and then told a story. It was a story his old law partner, the late J. Harry Covington, used to tell about a political oyster roast down on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

The oysters were served red hot, he said, and one fellow spit his out on the carpet and said to Mrs. Covington:

"You know, a darn fool would have swallowed that."

When the laughter had died down, Acheson told Governor Lee in effect that he wasn't going to swallow his question and get between the Governors and Federal aid.

Major Provisions of Senate Social Security Expansion Bill

Major provisions of the social security expansion bill that passed the Senate yesterday:

Extend old-age and survivor insurance coverage to 10 million additional persons, lifting the number covered to a total of 45 million.

New groups covered include five million nonfarm self-employed, one million regularly employed agricultural workers, one million domestic workers, about 1,400,000 State and local government employes and 200,000 Federal civilian workers not now under retirement plans and some 600,000 employes of nonprofit organizations.

These self-employed professions would not be covered: physicians, lawyers, dentists, osteopaths, chiropractors, optometrists, Christian Science practitioners, naturopaths, veterinarians, certified public accountants, architects and professional engineers.

Monthly benefits of some 2.9 million persons now receiving benefits would be increased about 85 to 90 percent on the average, from $26 a month to more than $48. In the lowest benefit groups, the increase would be more than 100 percent.

A new formula for computing primary benefits is provided: 50 percent of the first $100 of average monthly wage, plus 15 percent of the next $200, based on the maximum wage tax base of $3600.

Minimum primary benefits of $10 under existing law would be increased to $25, except for those with very low wages.

The maximum benefit of $85 under existing law would be increased to $150, but the maximum could not exceed 80 percent of the average monthly wage of the insured.

Eligibility requirements are greatly liberalized mainly to make it easier for older workers to qualify. Coverage would be required for only one half of the number of quarters since 1950. A minimum of six quarters is necessary, but may include coverage earned before 1951.

Thus any person aged 62 or more when the bill becomes law would be fully insured for benefits at age 65 if he had acquired six quarters of coverage at any time. Persons of 61 would require eight quarters, 60-year-olds, 10 quarters, etc. As under present law, the maximum requirement for a fully insured status would in no case exceed 40 quarters.

World War II veterans are granted wage credits of $160 a month for time spent in military or Naval Service between September 16, 1940, and July 24, 1947.

Present pay-roll taxes of 1½ percent each on workers and employers are continued through 1955, on the theory that receipts will meet all benefit obligations for the next five years. Starting in 1956, the rates will rise to 2 percent and climb gradually to 3¼ percent in 1970.

The wage base subject to taxes, however, is increased under both Senate and House bills from $3000 at present to $3600.

SECURITY—From Pg. 1

Social Security Bill Is Passed

with only one really close squeak. On one question of unemployment insurance policy, however, the committee suffered a bad upset.

On motion of Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), the Senate voted 45 to 37 to curb the power of the Federal Government to cut off State-aid unemployment insurance funds as a penalty for noncompliance.

Under the amendment, the Secretary of Labor would be required to give the Governor of a State 90 days' notice of a finding of noncompliance.

When he finally made such a finding, he could not withhold Federal funds until the highest State court had ruled on the question of entitlement to benefits.

The close call came on an amendment by Senator Russell B. Long (D., La.) to match State funds for the needy disabled, much as old-age assistance funds are now provided.

The House bill carries a similar provision, but Long's motion failed, 42 to 41. The Senate shouted down a later effort to reconsider the vote.

George agreed to accept, however, an amendment by Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) providing about 75 million dollars a year for Federal assistance to States on a matching basis, to aid relatives or others caring for dependent children.

Approved also were amendments:

Permitting some States not now eligible for Federal aid to the needy blind to qualify.

Providing compulsory old-age assistance coverage for employes of a transportation system any part of which was taken over by a State or local government after 1936.

Qualifying wholesale salesmen working for a single employer on a full-time basis for Social Security coverage.

Excluding funeral directors from coverage.

An attempt to increase the wage base subject to Social Security payroll taxes $1200 above the present $3000 level was led by Senate Majority Whip Francis Myers (Pa.), but failed, 45 to 36.

Four separate efforts to qualify State and local Government employes now under a retirement system for Social Security were shouted down. Even in the case of Wisconsin, which contemplated its own retirement system would supplement Federal Old-Age benefits, the Senate refused to authorize coverage.

Lucas and Myers together sought to grant larger benefits to workers who have been under the system a long time by providing a 1 percent increase for each covered year through 1950, and half of 1 percent after that.

The present law provides such an increment, but the House bill cuts it in half and the Senate bill eliminates it altogether as a benefit factor.

George argued that the Senate formula is already "more generous" than the House bill, and to add an additional benefit increment would unduly "burden" the system.

An attempt by Senators Myers and Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) to provide total and permanent disability insurance benefits, similar to a House bill proviso, was also shouted down after George took the floor in opposition.

How Old-Age Benefits Rise

By The Associated Press

The following tables illustrate individual monthly benefits a worker would receive on retirement at age 65 under the Social Security bill passed by the Senate if he qualified through covered employment after 1950.

Comparison is made with the present law and a bill already passed by the House. Figures are rounded to the nearest dollar.

The first table shows benefits payable to a retired worker in covered employment for all of five possible years before retirement and, in parentheses, the benefits if he had been covered in only 2½ of the five years.

Monthly Wage While Working	Benefit Payments Present Law	House Bill	Senate Bill
$ 50	$21 ($10)	$26 ($25)	$25 ($20)
$100	$26 ($21)	$51 ($26)	$50 ($25)
$150	$32 ($23)	$56 ($28)	$58 ($38)
$200	$37 ($26)	$62 ($31)	$65 ($50)
$250	$42 ($28)	$67 ($34)	$72 ($54)
$300		$72 ($36)	$80 ($57)

(Note: Present law does not collect taxes or compute benefits on wages over $250 a month).

The second table shows benefits payable to a retired worker in covered employment for all of 40 possible years before retirement and, in parentheses, the benefits if he had been covered in only 20 of the 40 years.

Monthly Wage While Working	Benefit Payments Present Law	House Bill	Senate Bill
$ 50	$28 ($12)	$30 ($25)	$25 ($20)
$100	$35 ($24)	$60 ($30)	$50 ($25)
$150	$42 ($27)	$66 ($33)	$58 ($38)
$200	$49 ($30)	$72 ($36)	$65 ($50)
$250	$56 ($33)	$78 ($39)	$72 ($54)
$300		$84 ($42)	$80 ($57)

About 2,900,000 persons now receiving benefits under the old-age and survivors' insurance system would have their monthly benefits increased an average of 85 to 90 percent under the Senate bill.

These are the payments to persons 65 and older who are already drawing payments from the Federal funds collected from payroll taxes.

The following table shows sample increases in individual monthly retirement benefits that would be provided by the Senate bill, compared with present law and a House-passed bill.

(All figures are rounded to the nearest dollar).

Present Law	House Bill	Senate Bill
$10	$25	$20
$15	$31	$31
$20	$36	$37
$25	$44	$48
$30	$51	$56
$35	$55	$62
$40	$60	$68
$45	$64	$72

(Note: The minimum under the Senate bill would be $25 except for those with wages averaging under $34 a month).

Counsel Gerhard P. van Arkel are:

(1) a 75-day limit on cumulative sick leave is provided in place of the present 60-day limit; (2) temporary teachers employed from year to year could accumulate sick leave like regular teachers; (3) three of the 10 days of sick leave allowed each year could be taken for personal business; (4) five days of part-pay leave—with the cost of hiring a substitute taken from teachers' salaries—would be allowed each year, and (5) part-pay leave to the end of a school year could be allowed a teacher incapacitated by illness when full-pay sick leave ran out.

Senator Harry Darby (R., Kan.) said at first he did not think the bill should be passed as long as the school board had not approved it, but he joined finally in the unanimous voice vote.

Other bills cleared by the committee would:

1. Apply the District minimum wage law to men.
2. Revise the District optometry law.
3. Establish District regulation of professional engineers.
4. Strengthen District regulation of architects.
5. Provide for mutual aid between fire fighting forces throughout the Washington metropolitan area.
6. Permit expediting removal of dead persons to funeral homes.
7. Change the title of the District Health Office to Director of Public Health.
8. Harvey L. Miller, Boxing Commission chairman, draw the pay for his office as well as Marine Corps retirement pay; also provide that one of the three boxing commissioners may live outside the District but in the metropolitan Washington area.

Meanwhile, the Senate District appropriations subcommittee set to work in meetings yesterday to revise the House-approved District budget bill. The sessions will continue today.

Appointment System Hit In Fairfax

The judicial appointment system in Fairfax County was attacked last night by advocates of the county manager form of government in the third of a series of meetings sponsored by the Fairfax County Government Study Commission.

One of the promanager speakers, Attorney Merrill Armour, charged that "one of the evils" of the present government is appointment of the police chief by the Circuit Court judge, who himself is appointed, not elected.

The attorney said the procedure can place a court defendant in the position of being tried by a judge whose protege—the police chief—pressed the charges. Under the county manager plan, he said, the manager, responsible to the board of supervisors, would make most appointments.

Backing Armour's viewpoint were Mrs. Edward Macy, president of the County League of Women Voters, and Mrs. Frank Russell, a League member.

The present Fairfax form of government, with a board of supervisors, was defended by Manning Gasch, a real estate operator, and by Attorney Paul Sweeney.

Positions now filled in Fairfax by Circuit Court judge appointment are police chief, electoral board, school trustee electoral board, and welfare board.

Last night's meeting, held in the Herndon High School, was attended by about 100 residents.

As a result of a petition to the Circuit Court, a referendum on a direct change to the county manager form will be held at an unspecified date.

Pocket the savings like thousands of families who've found rich Edwards at Safeway the finest buy in quality coffee today!

If you prefer rich vacuum-packed coffee—but shy at highest prices—Edwards is a cheering cup indeed! Here is the finest quality coffee at a real cash saving. Thousands who shop at SAFEWAY know this. They've changed to Edwards. They're saving money. They've found—as you will—that there's no reason to pay more when Edwards costs pennies less!

How can coffee taste so rich, so fresh... yet cost less money?

The answer is in Edwards straight-line distribution which has no equal anywhere. It works like this: When your Safeway Store—and others near it—need a fresh supply of Edwards, an order is placed. Then Edwards is fresh roasted and immediately rushed to SAFEWAY by truck and placed, fresh and fragrant, on the shelves. No warehouse lots... no "sleeping" in storage, losing flavor. No extra, costly handling. Edwards goes straight-line to your SAFEWAY. Your store gets it faster, you get it FRESHER—BY DAYS.

That's how these substantial savings are possible. That's why Edwards is always so rich and fragrant... why every pound is uniformly rich, uniformly fresh. Next time you're at SAFEWAY, notice how many careful shoppers choose Edwards. Then pick up a pound yourself. The sooner you start using Edwards, the sooner your savings begin!

Interesting facts about coffee today to help you get the best buy

Offer a coupon—make a customer. Pretty common practice today in the coffee business. And no doubt new brands of coffee (new to you) will try to induce you to buy a first pound by offering you a coupon—meaning you get so many cents off if and when you present it. (But of course, the next pound—and every pound—is right back at the regular high price.)

Edwards Coffee knows you want to save money

But why wait till you get a 10, 15 or 20¢ coupon from a coffee which you may or may not like at all? Edwards believes it's better to share the savings of its modern distribution method... by giving you a cash saving on every pound. That way, you can count on savings every tin, every time... every day at SAFEWAY! That also means... no tearing coupons out of newspapers... no picking them off the doorstep and holding them on the pantry shelf... no saving coupons packed in with the coffee. That's more work for you... more details. Edwards saves you time with savings all the time. You don't have to keep coupons in your purse. With Edwards, the savings remain in your purse—because the price is always lower than that of other vacuum-packed coffees of comparable quality.

And here's something about "specials": Even when other nationally known quality coffees go on "special"... marked way down... Edwards is still always less! You don't have to wait for specials to buy and enjoy good coffee. Edwards and SAFEWAY together give you this saving automatically.

Always rich coffee..... Fresher by days.....

THE LIBERTY BELL
. . . The original in Philadelphia

Where do you think the District's Liberty Bell should come to rest for all time? If you can produce the best answer, there's a $25 savings bond in it for you.

As part of the present Independence Savings Bond Drive conducted by the Treasury Department, each State and the District of Columbia have been given a full-size replica of the original Liberty Bell. Its sonorous peal now is being heard on the city's streets as a truck carries it around Washington to stir interest in the bond drive.

The States are making plans to place their bells in public buildings or other prominent spots as a perpetual symbol of independence. On each bell are cast the words on the original: "Proclaim Liberty Throughout All the Land Unto All the Inhabitants Thereof."

Award by The Post

The Washington Post will award the savings bond to the person who suggests the best place for the bell and gives his reasons in 25 words or less. Since many people may suggest the same place, it will be important to state cogently your reasons. Send your entry to Liberty Bell Editor, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C., postmarked before 12:01 a. m. Monday.

In front of the entrance to the Washington Monument; on the west Capitol plaza; inside the Library of Congress; in front of the Smithsonian Institution; behind the Zero Milestone.

Or, if you feel that since the bell is to be the property of the District it therefore should be located on District land rather than on or near Federal property, how about the plaza between the new District Building at the Municipal Center and the site of its proposed matching building? Or maybe somewhere near the old District Building? Or somewhere in Judiciary Square perhaps?

Here are some State plans. Maine will put its bell on the front steps of the statehouse. New York's will be placed somewhere in Albany, the State capital. Washington's will be exhibited in that State's historical museum. Missouri plans to build a marble canopy for its bell on the State capitol grounds at Jefferson City. The Governor of Arkansas has ordered the bell to be placed in the State capitol's rotunda.

Cast in France

The bells, each weighing 2080 pounds and made of 85 percent plus pure copper, were cast in France. They are slightly more than 3 feet in height and about 5 feet high if the wooden yoke from which they are suspended is included. Each has a 3-foot 2-inch clapper.

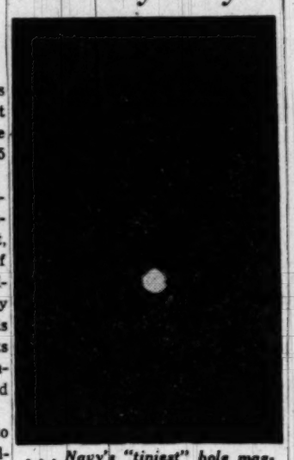
Only the famous crack on the original is missing from the replicas. But the crack has been painted on each replica.

Most States are planning July 4 celebrations and ceremonies when the bells will be turned over to them by the Treasury. The District has reported no plans to the Treasury, however. July 4 in Washington will be marked by a big celebration on the Monument Grounds. Perhaps you want to suggest that would be the day for the District to accept its bell and have it come to rest for future generations to see.

The idea chosen by the Washington Post as most appropriate and convincing will be forwarded to Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder for his consideration.

So get out pen and ink and send in your idea of the best location for the District's bell and add 25 words or less on why you think so.

3-5000th-Inch Hole Drilled by Navy



. . . Navy's "tiniest" hole magnified 108 times.

. . . A human hair, also magnified 108 times, is twice the diameter of the "tiniest" hole.

AT WHITE OAK—Using a standard jeweler's lathe to which a sliver-like drill was attached, a Naval Ordnance Laboratory technician has drilled what is believed to be the smallest hole ever made in metal in this country. It measures 3/5000ths of an inch in diameter, about half the thickness of the average human hair and equal in diameter to the thinnest strand of silk spun by a spider. Drill was made by stoning down a standard 4/1000th-of-an-inch drill under a microscope. Metal used was platinum

Burglars Set Up Flares Outside, Then Rob Store

Omaha, June 20 (AP).—Burglars who didn't want to be disturbed while they robbed a grocery store yesterday set out flares to keep cars away from the building.

Police said the burglars got the flares from a nearby construction job and used them to close off a driveway and parking spaces south of the store.

Then, unmolested, they snipped through the bars of a rear window with bolt cutters, cracked a safe inside the store and made off with about $8000 in cash and checks.

30 Million U. S. Adults Failed To Visit Dentist in 4 Years

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., June 20.—Although dental experts advise teeth examinations at least once a year, a Nation-wide survey shows that almost one adult in every two, or more than 45 million people, have not been to a dentist within the last two years, and some 30 million of these have not been in more than four years.

And about 4 million of these adults have never been to the dentist, the survey indicates.

As for going to a medical doctor, 29 percent of adults, or about 28 million, have not done that in the last two years. An annual physical examination is considered wise by medical authorities, especially in the middle and later years of life.

Each adult in the survey was asked two questions:

"How long has it been since you went to a dentist?"

"How long has it been since you went to a doctor?"

The following results are given in terms of percentages. The number of adults in each category can be found by applying the percentages against the estimated total U. S. population over 21 years of age, or approximately 96,000,000 persons.

One on the Aisle—

The Twenties Star In a Feature Film

By Richard L. Coe

"THE GOLDEN TWENTIES" is a fascinating scrapbook of the Harding-Coolidge-Hoover era. A March of Time feature-length release, it's at both the Dupont and the Little.

Compiled from thousands of newsreel spools, every scene is clipped from life as it was. With Frederick Lewis Allen, the Harper's editor whose "Only Yesterday" volume did much the same job, and Samuel W. Bryant as editors, it looks at the fading Wilson Administration as a prologue to a general picture of the twenties and traces politics, fashions, heroes, sports, thought and entertainment.

The soundtrack is geared to explain what you're watching, with such experts as Elmer Davis, Red Barber, Robert Q. Lewis, Allen Prescott and Allen as commentators.

Here are some of the things you see: The Senate Foreign Relations Committee turning us toward isolationism; Grover Whalen escorting such as Lindbergh, Queen Marie and Gertrude Ederle through Gotham welcomes; Billy Sunday exhorting the wayward; Calvin Coolidge breaking the Boston police strike, rising to the Presidency and stoically leaving that office; Valentino giving Vilma Banky a kiss that couldn't last so long today; the young John L. Lewis and the great Mother Jones, Gene Tunney going down for the long count; Rudy Vallee crooning "A Little Kiss Each Morning"; the Wall Street explosion, whose scars you can still see today at Morgan's; Texas Guinan and the speakeasies; William Jennings Bryan and Clarence Darrow at the Scopes "monkey" trial.

One could go on to include all the episodes of the 68 minutes. Thanks to the priceless film, all the headliners of that now gasping age have a curious and wonderful vitality. Small wonder, one thinks, that they were the headliners.

What conclusions can, or should, one draw from such a scrapbook? The picture is framed as the highlights seen by a schoolboy of the '50s, boning up in a public library on the days when his parents were waking up to life.

Naturally, such a collection of snapshots is only of the high spots, the exciting moments which in their time were important enough for the newsreel cameras. All but a smattering—the Scopes trial in Tennessee, the Florida land boom, the Hollywood and Chicago scenes—are laid in the news-conscious urban areas of the East—Boston, New York and Washington.

Highlights Hypo Tone

Yet, in the endless crowds that surge so constantly about these figures of the prominent, was the ordinary citizen, doing ordinary things, not crowding the speakeasies, not playing the market, not on strike or a race riot? About him surged these colorful events. He made them possible, yes, but he was not one of them, and the resultant highlights inevitably make more vivid the tone of the era.

This, then, is not quite history in the perspective of time. It has the pulse of a nation and the reality of real events. And it probably will have, for many who matured in the period, the effect of putting things together in chaotic order.

But its time stricture of 68 minutes can give you no "whys" and very little of the old placid stream that is the backbone of any country. Its excitement and very patness is also the 1950 professional observer, a hard but surface realist in a sentimental vein.

Which may well be why it will prove so entertaining and self-assured to the moviegoers of a generation later.

"A Day in Congress"

Also on both screens is the first of a projected series on how our Government works, produced by Edwin Ware Hullinger, "A Day in Congress." The film, made for educational purposes, efficiently traces the passage of a bill through Congress.

We watch the page boys at their unique school on Capitol Hill, visit congressional offices, look in on committee hearings and see how the legislators spend their day. There is an air of strictly factual approach to Lugi De Angelis' direction, and one is left to make up one's own mind on the efficiency of our Congress and the taxpayers who so beleaguer them for favors.

Other releases for Hullinger's "This Is Washington" series will tackle the executive departments of the Government as well as the judicial. One trusts they will employ the same factual approach for their educational purpose.

"GOING NATIVE" is coming up . . . The Capitol announces that the eleventh edition of its all-Washington area stage revue will be presented the week of August 21 . . . Application blanks for auditions can now be obtained in the lobbies of the Capitol, Palace and Columbia . . . Auditions will be held July 17, 18 and 19.

Hand-Hook Assault Charged to Amputee

Marlboro, Mass., June 20 (AP).—An amputee war veteran was charged in district court today with assault with a dangerous weapon because he allegedly struck a man with the metal hook that serves as a hand.

Charles Rocheford, 35, who lost a hand in the war, was granted a continuance to Saturday. The complainant, John J. Finan of Hudson, was charged with disturbing the peace.

MATINEE TODAY: Hurd Hatfield, Apollodorus to Paulette Goddard in "Caesar and Cleopatra,' which presents two matinees this week at the Olney Theater, today and Saturday, with the run ending Saturday night. A screen player of prominence, Hatfield is best remembered for his brilliant performance in "The Picture of Dorian Gray"

Chemist Wins $10,000 Prize For Research

Dr. Claude S. Hudson, chemical director of the National Institutes of Health, will receive a $10,000 cash award for his researches, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Hudson

Announcement of his selection for first prize award of the Sugar Research Foundation, Inc., was made here by Dr. Harlow Shapley, chairman of the National Science Fund, National Academy of Sciences, which administers the awards.

Dr. Hudson was chosen for his discoveries in carbohydrate chemistry and the functions of sugar. Among his achievements in the field, it was noted, have been the formulation of laws for enzyme actions, original work on the ring structures of sugar, syntheses of compound sugars and classification of carbohydrates.

Dr. Hudson, 69, of 3016 Tilden st. nw., was born in Atlanta, Ga., but was reared in Mobile, Ala. He was graduated from Princeton University, from which he received his B. S. degree in 1901; M. S., in 1902; Ph.D., in 1907, and an honorary degree of Doctor of Sciences, in 1947.

Since 1928, he has been director of the division of chemistry at NIH, in Bethesda, Md.

Housebreaking Suspect Held Under Bond

Samuel Leroy Saylor, 48, arrested in connection with the foiled burglary of a liquor store last Friday, was held under $10,000 bond yesterday by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Charges against Saylor were housebreaking and larceny. Lawrence continued the case until July 5.

Police said they arrested Saylor after two neighbors in the vicinity of the Dal-Green Liquor Store, 2701 12th st. ne., identified pictures of him as a man they saw in the vicinity of the store the day and night before the housebreaking.

William (Country) Carpenter, 47, surrendered near the store during a police search of the area. Police said Carpenter maintained he was alone in the burglary.

In a parked car in front of the store, police located the store's cash register with $900 in it. Whisky worth $91 also was found in the car.

Montgomery Seeks New FSA Building

Six Silver Spring area civic associations last night invited Congress to select suburban Montgomery County as the site for a new $11,000,000 Federal building.

The building would house the Federal Security Agency's Bureau of Old Age and Survivor's Insurance, now located in Baltimore.

The House yesterday passed a bill approving construction of the project in the metropolitan Washington area. Montgomery, Prince Georges and Baltimore Counties in Maryland, and Fairfax County in Virginia are all seeking the project.

The six civic associations met at the Bank of Silver Spring and unanimously adopted a resolution indorsing the House action and inviting the bureau to establish its headquarters in suburban Montgomery County.

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md) listed possible cites in Montgomery as the Government-owned land of nearly 1000 acres at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at Whiteoak and a tract near Potomac, Md., and the B. & O. Canal Parkway.

Beall, a member of the House Public Works Committee, said the proposed building will require 15 acres with parking space.

The meeting was sponsored by the Forest Grove Civic Association. Also represented were the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring and the civic associations of Woodside Park, Forest Estates, Glenview and McKinney Hills.

Old Age Unit's Return Voted

ing" 5000 moderate-income workers to bring them to "overcrowded" Washington, where rental housing and other living costs are higher.

These employes would have the alternative of spending four hours daily commuting between Baltimore and Washington, or "giving up their Federal jobs," Fallon told his colleagues.

Bolton added that "throwing 5000 employes on the Baltimore labor market would be distressing."

Failing with his "vicinity of Baltimore" amendment, Fallon then offered another, providing for locating the building "between Washington and Baltimore." This, too, was rejected by voice vote.

Under terms of the bill the decision as to a site is put in the hands of the General Services Administrator, who would be authorized to locate the building on land owned by or donated to the Government, in or near the District."

Cost of the building would be paid out of the Federal Old Age and Survivors Trust Fund. Planning and construction would take from 2 to 3 years after funds are made available to the Public Buildings Administration.

Representative Smith (D., Va.) said there are several locations available across the river in Virginia "at Washington's doorstep."

One is a 15-acre tract at Shirley Highway and Seminary rd., Arlington, he explained.

Representative Beall (R., Md.), opposing Fallon's location moves, called attention to three available sites in Montgomery County. He said one is on East-West Highway in Silver Spring; another at Georgia ave. and Forest Glen rd., and a third near the Naval Ordnance Laboratory in White Oak, Md.

Court Denies Fairfax Move To End Suit

A three-judge court that is hearing the annexation suit of Falls Church against Fairfax County yesterday rejected as "premature" a motion for immediate dismissal of the case.

After hearing brief arguments on the motion, the court ruled out further arguments on the grounds that there has been insufficient testimony thus far to provide a basis for a ruling.

The panel is composed of Judges Paul E. Brown, Burnett Miller and J. R. H. Alexander.

Most of yesterday's proceedings were spent in a review of maps and charts showing growth in recent years of the city of Falls Church, the "annexable zone" and other sections of nearby Virginia.

Details of the maps were outlined by Harlan Bartholomew, planning consultant employed by Falls Church, to familiarize the court with territorial questions that might arise later. Hearing of the suit will resume today at 10 a. m.

Franks told reporters they also discussed Japan's proposed entrance into the international wheat agreement and "mentioned indirectly" proposals to replace Nationalist China on the United Nations Security Council.

B Sts. Names To Be Changed September 1

District Commissioners yesterday agreed to change the names of B sts. ne. and se., to Constitution and Independence aves. respectively September 1.

The changes will have the effect of extending the avenue names in a straight line east from the Capitol to the Anacostia River. The name changes will not apply east of the Anacostia River.

Citizens and business groups in the area had indorsed the proposal at a hearing before the Commissioners Monday. There was no opposition.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young had proposed the changes in anticipation of developing an east Mall and, more immediately, because construction of the East Capitol Street Bridge will make these "pretty important" streets.

Let's stop calling it an "Agricultural Implement"

Plain talk is urgently needed today on a matter that affects the pocketbooks of all taxpayers . . . subsidies to commercial intercity transportation agencies that long ago outgrew the infant industry stage.

The yearly expenditures of the Federal Government alone . . . for aid to forms of transportation other than the railroads . . . now approach $1½ billion. These are your tax dollars — and ours. They help provide the highways used by huge commercial trucks, the airports and other facilities used by commercial airlines, and the waterways used by waterway carriers.

In contrast, the railroads do not receive, and do not want, one single penny of subsidy. They are self-supporting. They pay more than $1 billion a year in taxes. And their charges reflect their true costs of doing business.

We think it's time to call a spade a spade . . . time to point out that these subsidized carriers can destroy but not supplant the self-reliant railroads . . . time to urge that simple justice be done for the good of all America and all taxpayers.

Jachym Disappointed but Richer Over Nats Deal

With Shirley Povich

DETROIT, JUNE 20.—The John J. Jachym adventure with 40 percent of the stock of the Washington Baseball Club has ended, and if the 31-year-old former Marine is a disappointed man, he is also a richer one.

Young Mr. Jachym, from Jamestown, N. Y., who tried to ride full tilt into eventual control of the Washington team, is unloading this week to H. Gabriel Murphy, Washington insurance man who will be Clark Griffith's new partner. He is compromising—at a handsome profit.

POVICH

It wasn't what Jachym wanted, though he is turning a fast buck to an amount—between $80,000 and $100,000—that is calculated to cover most of his dismay. If one can be dismayed, that is, by fetching that kind of money out of a six-month pitch as a minority stockholder.

Jachym miscalculated six months ago when he bought the stock and presumed that Griffith would welcome him as a partner, but apparently he has made no mistake since.

No coincidence is the fact that he is choosing this week to get out from under. He bought his stock on December 19, 1949. Not until yesterday could he take advantage of the capital gains tax gimmick that lets hik keep 75 percent of his profits.

HIS 40 PERCENT of the club he bought at $70 per share from the Richardson estate which held 7880 shares. It took some kind of genius. Four other groups, including Griffith, were bidding for the bundle but Jachym wangled it. His profit can be measured from the fact that he turned down offers of more than $80 per share months ago.

Jachym completely deluded himself about the reception Griffith had in store for him back in December when he was to announce that he was Griff's new partner. He assumed Griffith would welcome him, if he came in politely asking only for a job and pledging his co-operation in building up the team. After all, he was not without a baseball background. He'd been a valued farm system aid of Red Rolfe, at Detroit and Branch Rickey, of Brooklyn.

Jachym honestly wanted to get into baseball again as a big league operator. He was content to work for Griffith during the latter's lifetime. After that, he wanted to buy out Griff's heirs, at a fair profit. Never was a 40 percent stockholder so flatly rebuffed by the fighting ire of a corporation president.

AS A MARINE on Guadalcanal, Jachym was decorated for leading his platoon against the Japs and got a battlefield promotion, but Guadalcanal was a push-over compared to his attempts to establish a beach-head in Griffith Stadium. There he encountered a murderous fire of resistance from Mr. Griffith.

The Old Gentleman wasn't going to regard fondly any partner who walked in on him virtually unannounced. It was like a stranger telling Griffith he had bought 40 percent of his household. Jachym, for all of his protestations of co-operation, was dead.

Hanging on the wall behind his desk in his Griffith Stadium office is an old muzzle-loading Civil War musket used by Mr. Griffith's father who "hunted for the market" to feed the laborers who were laying the Union Pacific tracks in southwestern Missouri. That Griffith was prepared to grab that blunderbuss off the wall, if necessary to repel invaders, his friends are certain. His ball club has been his life for 38 years.

HE DIDN'T NEED Jachym's help, Griffith said. His friends among the stockholders assured him voting control, he pointed out. He brushed off Jachym with two passes to the opening game and virtually bade him begone. The 80-year-old clubowner wasn't surrendering to "any upstart bush leaguer who thinks he can take over my ball club."

Not all of the stockholders, though, shared Griffith's thinking and they confessed an esteem for Jachym. They had to be impressed, they said, by the astuteness of his dealings. And Jachym was not without friends in high places. Commissioner A. B. Chandler went down the line for him, tried to get Griffith to accept Jachym.

If Griffith wasn't impressed by Jachym, financial circles were. They marvelled at his tirelessness and his ability to swing a $550,000 cash deal for the purchase of the Washington stock, with less than $100,000 cash of his own. Bankers couldn't miss the fact that Jachym could borrow $400,000 from Oilman Hugh Grant with the prospectus he submitted to grant.

THERE WAS no mistaking the fact, either, that Jachym was the only successful bidder for the Richardson stock. And that under his arrangement with Grant, ownership of the stock was in Jachym's name. Thus the resale profits all go to Jachym.

Jachym didn't go into the Washington deal as a speculator, but as a result of it, he has made a reputation as a businessman. In the last few months, business syndicates have sought him out as an adviser, asked him to represent them. A place in the financal world opened up for him.

He'd still rather be a stockholder and active in the management of the Washington club, because he fancies himself a baseball man. The deal for the Washington stock didn't turn out the way he'd have liked, but it opened new vistas for him. He is a sure-shot to be heard from in the baseball business when he's made his own pile.

90 Kids Attend Golf Clinic

Ninety youngsters turned out yesterday to the free golf clinic sponsored by the public golf courses at East Potomac driving range. Al Tredor, E. P. pro, spent the hour teaching them the fundamentals of the backswing in the use of the wood clubs.

Clubs, balls, and other equipment was furnished free. Other clinics, of five lessons each, will be organized at Anacostia, Rock Creek, and Fort Dupont public golf courses. At the end of the summer, a Small Fry Tournament, open only to beginners who attended the clinic, will be held.

Hodges Hits 4-Run Blast

Dodgers Beat Reds, Take Over 1st Place

Brooklyn, June 20 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers took over undisputed possession of first place in the National League tonight by defeating Cincinnati's Reds, 8-2, as the St. Louis Cardinals lost to the Giants.

Gil Hodges hit a grand-slam homer in the third inning for the Dodgers.

It was Brooklyn's fifth straight victory.

A gathering of 16,180 saw Preacher Roe scatter 11 hits to register his eighth victory of the season. Aided by four double plays, Roe pitched himself out of several tight spots and didn't walk a single batter. One Cincinnati run was unearned.

Hodges' grand slam with the bases loaded in the six-run third was the big Dodger blow. It was the only hit off Frank Smith who turned in an amazing relief job after relieving Loser Ken Raffensberger in the third.

Bill Cox and Carl Furillo also hit for the circuit, the latter moving into the .300 class as he maintained his .500 average over a 10-game streak. The Dodgers have hit homers in 14 straight games.

Lieut. Col. Jim Wilson continued his two-over-par pace at Fairfax Country Club, carding a 73, which, added to his 73 of yesterday, gave him a 146 and the lead over the 136-man field in the Headsuarters Command Air Force golf tournament.

Wilson finished a stroke ahead of Tech. Sergt. Eugene Remmell, with whom he was tied yesterday, when Remmell bogied the thirteen and fifteenth holes coming in to card a 74, making his total 147.

Col. Ben Schriever, former Belle Haven champion, carded a 76 today, and finished third with a total of 150. Play continues through today and tomorrow to determine the six finalists who will travel to Wright-Patterson Field, Dayton, Ohio, to compete in the All Air Force tournament.

Murphy Gets Jachym Stock by Tomorrow

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The transfer of John J. Jachym's $550,000 holdings in the Washington Baseball Club to Gabe Murphy, local insurance broker and "warm friend" of Nats President Clark Griffith will be completed in New York today or tomorrow.

Jachym's stock, more than 7000 shares, is now in the hands of a New York bank. The deal between the 31-year-old frustrated stockholder and the 46-year-old former graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown University will be completed in the law offices of Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett, Murphy's New York attorneys.

Jachym, who purchased the stock only last December, is selling his 7880 shares at a profit of approximately $10 a share and will realize about $80,000 from his short term investment.

"I am tickled pink that Murphy gets the stock," Griffith said yesterday when he learned that his friend would be his new associate. "I've known him for a ong time, worked with him when he was at Georgetown University and welcome him into our organization. He'll succeed Fred Ball on the board of directors."

Ball, Jachym's Washington attorney, is assistant treasurer of the Nats, the only concession Griffith would make to Jachym, whose surprising sale of the stock was prompted by Griffith's refusal to give him an active voice in the management of the baseball club.

Murphy is purchasing the stock in his own right and is not the front man for a local group, as some observers speculated Monday when news of the impending deal was first heard.

It is also known that the former Hoya football end does not seek active participation in the club. He is content to go along as an investor with his good friend Griff.

The friendship between Griffith and Murphy is no overnight affair. They came to know each other 20 years ago when Murphy, then graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown, made arrangements with Griffith for the use of Griffith Stadium by the Hoya team for its football games.

Murphy played end for three years for the Hoyas under Lou Little, present Columbia coach, and stayed on as graduate manager of athletics under Little and later Coach Tommy Mills. He remained in that capacity for 10 years, resigning to enter the insurance business.

He is married and has two daughters, Marie Dennet and Elizabeth. The Murphys live at 2762 Chain Bridge Road, nw.

Chicago, June 20 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox defeated the Chicago White Sox, 5-3, before 35,578 persons tonight behind the seven-hit pitching of Ellis Kinder and Mel Parnell. The Red Sox hammered Bill Wight for 10 hits in snapping their five-game losing streak.

Lightly Campaigned Kensington Lad Wins Again at Delaware

Bill Bennings

AT DELAWARE

DEAR FOLKS:

The boys and girls returning on the B. & O. Race Special are peeved because the train doesn't stop at Laurel. Naturally they want to take in the trots. Last night about 30 customers got off at Baltimore and took a bus to the raceway. The others grumbled into the Union Station and asked me to do something.

All I can do is to mention it to the railroad people who take a dim view. The $1,000 added Dover Stakes hold the spotlight on the Wednesday program. The Brookfield Farm's entry of Iliad and Iswas looks like the favorite at about 8 to 5.

The movies of the Tom Roby Steeplechase were shown to Tom Roby, the paralyzed former steeplechase rider, at the Mary Immaculate Hospital in New York last Sunday. Roby, injured here in 1942, had the film run several times. See you on the rail.—BILL.

3-Year-Old Was on Shelf Last Year

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Delaware Park, June 20.—Kensington Lad, a brown colt who failed to start as a juvenile and has been only lightly campaigned in his third year, turned in his second victory of the meeting here today. Carrying the colors of Charles C. Jones, the son of Firethorn came charging through the stretch to win in going-away fashion by a length and a half.

Fox Catcher Farm's Gold Jintown was second, another length and a half in front of Lazy Franch's High Bracket. Four others competed in the feature, for some reason or another dubbed the Blackbird.

It was in a favorite role that Kensington Lad performed under the handling of Jack Robertson. He Paid $5.40 and was clocked in 1:48 3-5 for the mile and a sixteenth over a track slow as the result of rain last night.

High Bracket took th lead on the backstretch and had all the earmarks of a winner until he faultered in the stretch. Kensington Lad came on to take command and was drawing out when Gold Jintown caught the tiring High Bracket approaching the wire.

The program, among other things, was productive of a dead-heat for win position. Pierce Holton's Jo Ballet and Frank A. Bonsal's French Rose came into the finish line as a team in the second race. The photo, scanned with a magnifying glass, could not separate them, Jo Ballet paid $3.50 and French Rose $2.80.

Cullinane Wins Junior Golf Title With 74

Ed Burnap Misses Out By Stroke

A new star appeared in the area's Junior golf firmament yesterday as 15-year-old Anthony "Perky" Cullinane won the District Golf Association's Junior Tournament at Bethesda with a 74.

Cullinane, a freshman at St. John's, playing for Kenwood, posted 37s on both his outgoing and incoming rounds. His total score, four-over-par, was the best in many years for the event, Tournament Director Frank Emmet said.

Ed Burnap of Columbia narrowly missed winning the victor's gold medal and the Albert McKenzie Memorial Cup when he arrived at the green of the eighteenth hole in 72 strokes. He three-putted the green, however, and finished second with a 75. John Eisinger of Kenwood was third with 76. A field of 55 entered the meet. Results:

GPO Fish Treasury Saves $10 Prize for Largest Fish

By Ralph Murdock

FAIR CATCHES of hardheads at the Gooses were recorded up to Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lausch and Mr. and Mrs. Clair Cochran of Lancaster, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. McCarty of the District nailed 20 whoppers.

Murdock

The G.P.O. Fishing Club turned out in full force on Sunday and drew a complete blank. A $10 prize to the captain of the boat catching the largest fish went back into the treasury. None of the eight boats landed a fish, not even a tiny one. Over 100 anglers from the big print shop participated in the outing.

Howard Arquette and Bill Brown while fishing with Capt. Thomas Webb, out of Herring Bay, pulled the unexpected when they landed two baby black drum which weighed 7½ and 10 pounds respectively.

They are a rarity in this area and were boated off Holland Point.

Here are some of the reports of local anglers who fared well in other fishing areas. Paul Skelly, Francis Skelly, John Battistee and Alton Roberts picked up 171 bluefish at Ocean City on Sunday under the guidance of Capt. Talbot Bunting who pilots the Cecil B.

A PARTY OF 10 fishermen from the District who found the Atlantic Ocean too rough for good angling chose the Delaware Bay off Cape May for trout fishing. They were Zygmand Humin, Willie Jones, Milton Clarke, Frank Eslinger, Harvey Lowe, Pat O'Flynn, Marvin Payne, Griff Morrison, Tommy Morrison, and Jerry Jones. Capt. Harry Parsons of Lewes, Del., was the skipper and a total of 587 trout were yanked in by the locals. The trout were pan size.

DR. JOHN SCHREIBER, Norm Casperson, Hugh Collins, Joe Winebrenner, Harold Carr and Ed Ferrell have returned home from a two-day fishing trip at Chincoteague, Va. An assortment of fish which consisted of 300 pounds of porgies, 120 trout, 8 bluefish, 7 kingfish, 12 flounders, some pigfish, sea robins and perch were taken by the local sextet.

Thirty-five sharks also were hauled in, the largest being a four-and-a-half-footer. The guide was Capt. Gene Jester. All of the fish except the porgies were taken inside the Chincoeague Inlet.

Getting back to the local situation, Sid Atlas and Ben Furmen had a red-letter day at Solomons Island. While chumming with Capt. Orville Davies, the pair boated 68 rockfish from three-quarter to two pounds, four big hardheads and nine speckled trout. They were anchored about 25 feet from Old Cedar Point Lighthouse.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Klutz

Blistering Attack Led By Cabinet Member on Civil Service System

A Cabinet member spearheaded a blistering attack on the Civil Service system the other day at a closed meeting of the President's Management Committee. The operation of the commission as well as policies and laws that make i difficult to fire questionable employes were lambasted by the committee members as well a Federal officials who appeared befor it.

PEOPLE: Richard E. Neustadt has joined the White House staf to work on legislative problems Harry McKittrick has succeeded him on Budget Bureau's legislative staff . . . Harold Merrill i chief of the new community planning section at Housing and Home Finance . . . L. W. Hoelscher has been appointed special assistant t the Army comptroller. Both Merrill and Hoelscher transferred from the Budget Bureau . . . Mrs. Eleonore Dmitrieff last night wa presented with the annual award to the Federal worker who doe the most to promote recreation activities.

RFC: Several influential Senators are threatening to fight the renomination of any and all present members of the Reconstruction Finance board of directors. They have sent word to the White House that RFC needs a complete change of board members. The terms of all five members will expire next weekend. Meantime, opposition to the President's plan to switch RFC to Commerce appears to be gaining strength.

PAY BILL: A bill to boost the salaries of postmasters and postal supervisors has been revised by the staff of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee. Chairman Johnston promises to get it approved at the next meeting of his committee. The pay bill is needed since the salaries of the people who are responsible for operating the world's largest business—the postal service—have lagged far behind those paid in both Government and private industry.

COMMERCE has a study under way that likely will lead to consolidation of its personnel offices in the field. Oliver C. Short, the department's personnel chief, is conducting the inquiry.

RECRUITING: A bill to give Federal agencies the primary responsibility for the recruitment of most of their employes under Civil Service Commission direction is about to be introduced in both the Senate and the House.

At long last, the Administration has agreed on a bill to carry out the principle of recruiting and examining reforms recommended by the Hoover commission. Separate bills to make effective Hoover suggestions for employe training, changes in the Veterans' Preference Act, and salary fixing will be introduced at later dates.

JUSTICE: Its United States attorneys, marshals, and employes in their offices are getting only one week's pay in checks now being distributed. Several thousand employes the country over are involved.

The department is "broke". It hasn't the money to meet the full cost of salaries for these employes. However, the Senate can be expected to approve $880,000 requested by the department for this purpose.

No other Justice employes will get half-pay checks. Congress authorizes the department to draw funds from the Treasury to pay most of its employes on schedule pending approval of the deficiency bill. The House failed to act on the $880,000 requested for marshal and district attorney offices. That's why this fund couldn't be advanced under the resolution.

PEOPLE: Albert Abrahamson, a Bowdoin College professor who is a former Labor Department official, will work for the National Security Resources Board during the summer months . . . Viola S. Schantz will be a delegate to the NEFE's national convention at Los Angeles in September. Her alternate is Mignon Miller . . . At the Office of Naval Research here, cash awards for economy suggestions have been given to Elizabeth M. Haggart, $15; Owen Allen Keen, $20, and Harry Hyman, $15 . . . Recent retirees from Agriculture: Bessie I. Browning, Georgia E. Cantrell, Cora L. Feldkamp, Ada M. Hutton, Katharine Jacobs, Civella A. Lewis, Leon E. Morales, Osmundo Reynante, Josephine M. D. C. Building Aide Is Fired After Inquiry Into Loan

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

District Commissioners yesterday fired a city building inspector, Frederick A. Humm, who reportedly obtained a $300 loan from a builder whose project he was inspecting.

The Commissioners acted on the recommendation of former Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher who had been investigating the case since Humm was suspended with pay April 27. Maher's report and the Commissioners' action were revealed by Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young.

The Commissioners had suspended Humm on the basis of a preliminary investigation and report that he "did receive money from one Henry Levin . . . then engaged in the construction of certain buildings known as 5615 through 5625 B st. se., which buildings it is your duty as assistant building inspector of the District of Columbia to inspect."

From his further study Maher concluded that Humm "obtained a loan of $300 from Mr. Henry Levin or Mr. Alvin Brown at a time when his duties required him to inspect construction work of Mr. Levin and Mr. Brown." Brown and Levin were building associates, Maher said. The project included six two-story brick homes, building officials said.

Humm has denied receiving any money, according to both Maher and Humm's attorney, William E. Owen.

Owen yesterday said he thought the investigation had been handled "rather lightly" and that he may ask the Commissioners for a further hearing. "We were not given an opportunity to cross-examine those who had accused him or to to be present when they testified," Owen stated.

According to Maher's report, Levin testified that while Humm was inspector of the B st. project he approached Levin and "asked for a loan of $300, stating family financial troubles." Levin told Maher he made a cash loan to Humm a few days later after consulting Brown.

In support of this testimony, Levin produced a "book reflecting out-of-pocket expenses on the job with an entry 'Humm—$300 (loan)'" Maher reported. Levin told Maher there had been only a verbal agreement on repayment.

Maher's report further quoted Levin as stating that sometime after March 25 Humm asked him "not to say anything about the loan, and that if he were called to testify to say Humm needed it for a car." Levin told Maher he refused to do this.

The Washington Post
FREDERICK A. HUMM
. . . accused of taking loan

Brown told Maher he discussed the loan with Levin and Humm. Humm told him he needed the money for "sickness or something," Brown reportedly testified.

Humm was quoted by Maher as stating he "had had disagreements with Brown because he had insisted that Brown make certain changes in connection with the project." Humm reportedly told Maher Brown had offered to loan him money but that "he never got the money nor intended to get it."

As a result of the Hume case the Department of Inspection has changed its regulations, Director Robert H. Davis said yesterday, to prohibit empolyes from accepting "loans" or "favors" from persons connected with jobs they inspect. The regulations had previously forbidden acceptance of "monies, gifts or gratuities."

Inspection department records showed Humm is 49 and lives at 1204 N. Queen st., Arlington. He had held his job since 1941 and earns $4200 a year.

Witnesses Tell Jury Tyler Freely Confessed Killings

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

William A. Tyler, jr., freely confessed to the "Good Friday" killing of two Lansburgh & Bro. watchmen, and then reenacted the crime for store officials, two detectives testified yesterday.

The signed 10-page confession will be read to the four-man, eight-woman District Court jury today, with defense attorneys striving to show it was obtained after police allegedly beat the 18-year-old Tyler.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff overruled a defense plea to keep the evidence from the jury. He ruled the defense moved too late since four witnesses earlier in the day testified that Tyler had confessed orally to them.

Four Witnesses Testify

They are Det. Sergts. Lawrence Hartnett and Lloyd B. Furr, United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence and Army Captain Wilfred J. Curley, operator of a lie-detector apparatus.

The written confession tells how Tyler, intending to loot the store's cashroom, stabbed to death the watchmen, Oliver R. Hess, 57, and John C. Carpenter, 67, on April 7.

"I tried the door to the cashier's cage and could not open it and went back upstairs to the sixth floor. As I got to the top of the stairs the door of the sixth floor opened and the guard came out and looked down the steps and saw me. He reached for his gun and we tussled and someway I got him down. He was on the floor face down. I stabbed him . . . I dragged him by his feet through the door into the corridor on the sixth floor. I took his flashlight.

"I went back down the stairs to the main floor and the other guard was standing by the door at the elevator with his back to me. I grabbed him and threw him down and bound and gagged him. I drug him in the bathroom. I went back up to the cashier's cage and opened the door and started searching the drawers and desk and closets and found nothing.

"I came back down stairs to the bathroom and saw the guard untying himself and he yelled for help and I grabbed him again, we started to rassle and I pulled the knife and stabbed him."

Sergeant Hartnett and Furr both testified that at no time was Tyler harmed while under arrest. They said he asked to have the lie-detector test, but in the middle of it decided to confess.

According to Hartnett, Tyler said:

"I would like to have Detective Furr to have the statement. He is a very nice police officer and I would prefer giving it to him."

"Couldn't Beat Machine"

Furr quoted Tyler as jesting about the lie detector test, "You said when I took the test, the needle would jump out the window. It jumped, but it didn't jump out the window. I thought I could beat the machine, but I couldn't," Tyler was quoted.

Commissioner Lawrence said that at the preliminary hearing May 6, Tyler agreed in what Furr declared Tyler had done in accomplishing the killings.

At one point, Tyler didn't agree with the charge, saying he had no malice in the slaying. He meant only in rob and not to kill, the commissioner said Tyler declared.

Prosecutors Cecil R. Heflin and Raymond Baker found their first stumbling block of the first-degree murder case in witness Ernest Price, 24, who is awaiting trial for a $4200 robbery. Price was Tyler's cellmate at District Jail.

Children's Hospital Party Honors Veteran Employes

Today's children bear sickness and pain better than 1920's youngsters.

From experience, Mrs. Frances Albanese is qualified to talk on that subject. For the past 29 years, she's been continuously employed at Childrens Hospital.

These days, Mrs. Albanese explained, the nurses, welfare workers and nurses' aides all combine to ease the fear of the unknown which grips most children when they enter a hospital.

Some 26 other employes received service certificates at the overflow party last night. Their service time ran from 5 years to 29. In addition to her certificate, Mrs. Albanese, who works in the hospital admitting office, received a gold wrist watch.

Certificates were presented by Dr. Montgomery Blair, the hospital's medical director. Those with more than 20 years of service were:

Miss Caroline Sweeney, of the hospital's child welfare service; Mrs. Olive Tabb, personnel director; Miss Hazel Royer, dispensary administrator; Miss Mary O'Sullivan, operating room supervisor, Walton McCarthy of the maintenance staff, and Miss Edith Tarkington, the hospital administrator.

Uninspected Milk Sale Banned Here

Surprise Action By Commissioners Trims Daily Flow By 20,000 Gallons

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The District Commissioners in a surprise maneuver yesterday banned in Washington after July 1 the sale of milk not inspected by the District Health Department.

The action will bar importation of about 20,000 gallons a day, now being brought in. It will make the District more dependent than ever before upon the production of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association.

The move also completely ignored a tentative agreement with the Senate Agriculture subcommittee on utilization of farm crops, headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) to postpone action for eight to 10 months. This promise was made a week ago during the drivers' strike that tied up milk deliveries in the Washington area for eight days.

Action Follows West Ruling

The Commissioners' decision was reached immediately on receipt of an opinion by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West. West ruled that the Milk Act of 1925 "plainly and unambiguously prohibits the shipment of milk and cream into the District from farms which have not been inspected and given proper rating by the health officer."

As if to soften the sudden action, the Commissioners later announced that they would hold hearings July 10 on proposed changes in the legislation. The hearings will deal particularly with methods of sterilization and rules governing pasteurization.

District regulations set up for enforcement of the milk law call for steam at 180 degrees Fahrenheit instead of the more modern and generally accepted sterilization by chemicals.

Congressional Reactions

The decision to knock out the wartime emergency measure under which large quantities of milk have been brought into the District daily since 1942 brought quick reactions in Congressional quarters.

Representative Edward T. Miller (R., Nebr.) declared "this action makes a change in the District Milk law more essential than ever before."

Dr. Miller added that he plans to introduce today or Wednesday a measure to repeal the present law and draw up an entirely new code. He hopes to get hearings started within two weeks—as soon as Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) returns from South Carolina.

"The law," he said, "is 25 years old. It has a lot of things in it that are not good. There has been a lot of progress in the last quarter of a century that it fails to recognize." The District, he added, should not bar practices that are acceptable to the United States Public Health authorities and health officers of other States and cities.

Gillette Surprised

Senator Gillette expressed surprise at the Commissioners' action. He, too, plans a complete overhaul of milk legislation. However, he intends to wait until present hearings by his subcommittee are ended before drawing his measure.

The law he has in mind, he said, will be applicable not only to the District. It would wipe out the artificial boundaries over milksheds established by the sanitary regulations of various cities. It would place all inspections of milk farms and milk handling under the Public Health Service and the Food and Drug Administration.

Gillette's committee will resume its hearings into milk Thursday.

Any effort to change the milk laws will run into determined opposition from Virginia and Maryland members of Congress. Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.) of the nearby Virginia congressional district, opposed any changes in the milk act at a recent hearing.

Other Proposed Changes

Besides the regulation on sterilization, the Commissioners will consider other proposed changes in the milk enforcement order July 10. Most significant among these are:

1. One to permit "loafing barns" where cows can be free to move around. Stanchions would be used in a "milking parlor" only during the milking time. Present rules require that cows be kept in stanchions when not in pasture.

2. One requiring records of all dairies to be open for inspection by the Health Department to prevent illegal importation of milk.

3. One requiring that milk have a bacteria count of not to exceed 100,000 when leaving a farm, nor more than 200,000 just before pasteurization. The present regulations require only that the milk have less than 40,000 count after pasteurization.

4. A rule requiring all farm and dairy employes to be examined annually for communicable diseases.

5. That all herds in the area be a part of the Agriculture Department's brucellosis (Bang's disease or undulant fever) eradication program.

Bus Destroys Building Front in Crash

By William Klemm—The Washington Post

TRIPLE PLAY—Three passengers were injured in a Capital Transit bus that plowed into the above building at 925 20th st. nw., after the vehicle had tangled in a 3-car crash killing one driver and injuring three other persons at 20th and K sts. nw. The building houses the Hammond and Halpern Dental Laboratory. Total damage was estimated at $8000

Aid Requests Shower Down On Play Unit

The District Recreation Board last night weathered the annual bombardment of requests for bigger, better and more play facilities.

More than 150 persons gathered in the board room of the District Building to suggest items for inclusion in the Board's budget request for fiscal 1952. The board will meet July 7 to begin shaping the budget.

Requests ranged from padlocks to keep playground swings from being used improperly at night to urgent demands for more swimming pools and playground sites.

Mrs. Edward Candee, representing the Pre-School Mothers' Council, asked for about $30,000 to bring the 39 pre-school centers "up to standards."

Walter Bird, president of the North Washington Recreation Council, wanted funds for a new shelter house at the Hamilton Playground and asked that the 25-year-old shelter house there now be moved to the Luzon Avenue Playground.

Three more swimming pools were requested by Col. Campbell Johnson, representing the Americans for Democratic Action. As did several others, he asked for additional playground lighting as a method of expanding facilities economically.

Swimming pools were also desired by speakers for the Congress Heights P-TA, the Northeast Boundary Civic Association, the Southwest Neighborhood Council, and the Recreation of Area 23.

Representatives of about 40 organizations appeared

At the annual board meeting which preceded the open hearing, Harry S. Wender was reelected for his ninth consecutive term as chairman. Also reelected were James E. Schwab, vice chairman, and Mrs. Alice C. Hunter, secretary.

Rather than operate the alley playground, the board decided to "make every effort" to provide a planned program for Snow's Court children at the Briggs-Montgomery playground.

In other business, the board:

1. Accepted a special committee recommendation to reject a request by the Lincoln Civic Association that the board operate the Snow's Court playground.

2. Announced that in response to its request, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission has recommended the addition of two units to the Recreation System Plan in the Fort Dupont area. The added units would be operated on a nonsegregated basis.

3. Asked the Board of Education to assign all or some of its property at Mt. Olivet rd. and Holbrok st. ne. to the board for development of the Trinidad Playground.

4. Asked the Board of Education to assign it property east of the Stoddart School for construction of a shelter house.

5. Recommended to National Capital Parks the acceptance of low bids for the construction of bath and shelter houses at Georgetown and Rosedale playgrounds, and for the improvement of Edgedood playground.

Drunk Drivers Apt to Escape With No More Than $100 Fine

By Alfred E. Lewis and Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporters

They killed 10 of the city's 71 traffic victims last year.

Yet these drunk drivers—potential killers all—are apt to receive no more than a fine in the courts if no death is involved.

Police use the latest chemical tests to build up an air-tight case against the drunk driver. The office of the Corporation Counsel is successful in obtaining the conviction of 85 percent of the offenders.

"The District's drunk driving law is all right," said Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King yesterday.

"The problem lies not with the law but with the inadequate sentences meted out. If you want to stop drunk drivers, put them in jail and let them know they will go to jail whenever they get caught.

"In Montgomery County a drunk driver gets 90 days in jail. Here he gets an average of a $100 fine. In Montgomery County you have very few drunk drivers. Here you have many more.

"Every driver in town knows that he can take a taxi to any point in Washington for 90 cents. Make him know that he will go to jail for driving while drunk and you will have fewer drunk drivers."

Jurors Seeing Themselves?

Assistant Corporation Counsel George Donnella wonders if the conviction rate might not be higher if it were not for those jurors who themselves have taken a chance and driven home from a party with a few drinks under their belts.

"Such a juror," says Donnella, "is apt to find a defendant innocent unless the degree of intoxication is extreme."

In recent years police have strengthened their evidence against drunk drivers with the use of urine and blood tests. The tests are given only when the driver is obviously under the influence of alcohol.

"The use of these chemical tests," says Inspector Arthur E. Miller, "has been a deterrent to persons operating under the influence, and the tests have been helpful in obtaining convictions of those charged."

Miller was the District's traffic inspector when the chemical tests were inaugurated.

Tests Held Supplementary

Under a 1947 directive, members of the police force were instructed that "these chemical tests are a supplement to the usual evidence, namely, ability to walk, speech, odor of breath, color of eyes and face and any violation he may have committed and other unusual acts."

So the old police system of make 'em walk a straight line and smell their breath has not been discarded either.

What if the suspect refuses to cooperate? Then no test is taken. But the fact that he refused to take the test is added testimony against him at his trial. However, 9 of 10 persons submit voluntarily, according to Miller.

It has never been decided whether police have the legal right to take test specimens forcibly from an unwilling suspect. There's never been a test case simply because police have not made any forced tests.

Lieut. William Liverman, head of the police Accident Investigation Unit, says what police want now is a law that would legally establish as drunk a person with .15 percent alcohol in his blood.

As it stands now, the Health Department chemist who analyzes the blood or urine specimen can testify as to the alcoholic content in the blood but is not qualified to state what percentage constitutes drunkenness. The prosecution must also call upon the testimony of a doctor skilled in pathology.

Officials Agree On Central Cafeteria Plan

General agreement on a central cafeteria program for the District public schools was reached yesterday by the Board of Education and the Commissioners.

School board members conferred with the Commissioners on legislation to be recommended to Congress that would give the board power to run school cafeterias. At present cafeterias are operated separately by the principals.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West was authorized to modify a proposed bill submitted by the board. The change would provide for the payment of central cafeteria personnel out of a revolving fund rather than by direct appropriation.

The school board has been seeking legal authorization to take over the cafeterias for more than a year. Delay resulted when District Auditor A. R. Pilkerton urged the Commissioners to turn down the board proposal on the ground that cafeteria expenses would be unjust to the taxpayer. Pilkerton sat in on yesterday's conference.

Board members also conferred with the Commissioners on legislation that would permit the prosecution of loiterers on school property. The Commissioners said they would seek such legislation.

School Board Hiring Policy Is Reaffirmed

The Board of Education's personnel committee yesterday reaffirmed a policy that vacancies in school officer posts be filled first with employes already in the system.

Outsiders will be hired only if qualified persons cannot be found locally.

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, a member of the committee, voted for the measure although she said it might lead to "dangerous inbreeding." The survey on District schools, prepared by Dr. George D. Strayer of Columbia University, criticized the local school system for this "inbreeding" and said it was brought about by the failure of the board to attract educators trained outside the city.

The committee approved a suggestion of School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning that a $10,000 annual authorization to bring in out-of-town educators as consultants be broadened to cover expenses of bringing prospective employes to the city for interviews.

Dr. Corning said the present lack of funds for this purpose handicaps recruiting of personnel.

Mr. Simon

One man was killed and six persons were injured in the collision at 20th and K sts. nw. at 1:46 a. m.

The dead man was Heston Simon, 26, of 216 R st. ne., driver of the second car.

Only one of the six persons injured remained in the hospital last night. He is George M. Griffith, 46, of 640 5th st. nw., a bus passenger. He was at Gallinger Hospital with possible fractures of the vertebrae.

The other injured were: Miciotto, 43, of 3300 17th st. ne.; Mrs. Catherine Simon, 28, of 216 R st. ne., wife of the dead man; Catherine Moore, 52, of 12 Rosecrest ave., Alexandria, a bus passenger; Joseph Crisine, 49, of 66 New York ave. nw., a bus passenger, and Joseph M. Simcie, 21, of 1711 19th st. nw., driver of the Capital Transit bus.

Simcie has been charged with failing to yield the right of way to another vehicle and hold-for-the-coroner. He has been released in the custody of Capital Transit officials.

Miciotto told police he will report on the hold-for-the-coroner charge today.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District Coroner, who ordered the technical charge against Miciotto, said a date for the inquest has not been set.

After the accident, the bus crossed K st., ran up on the sidewalk and smashed into a building at 925 20th st. nw., housing the Hammond and Halpern Dental laboratory.

Police estimated $8000 damage to the building and $2000 damage to the three vehicles.

Jail Terms Requested For Boulevard Speeders

Baltimore, June 20 (AP).—A prosecutor "appalled at the increasing number of accidents" on the Baltimore-Washington blvd. declared today he will seek jail terms for speeders who come under his jurisdiction.

State's Attorney Daniel M. Murray, jr., of Howard County said he is convinced "the majority (of boulevard accidents) are due to speeding.

"Henceforth, I will ask magistrates to give jail terms where speed contributed to the cause of accidents," Murray said.

Last night Murray appeared before Magistrate J. Lewis Thompson at Elkridge to prosecute Horace Gail, 28-year-old Baltimorean charged with reckless driving. Gail's car collided with another at Elkridge on May 6, injuring six persons.

Besides a $100.75 fine, Gail drew a 30-day jail sentence.

Jury Tamper Count Indicts Band Manager

Band Manager Daniel M. Gary, 54, yesterday was indicted on charges of tampering with the jury that convicted gambler William "Snags" Lewis and two others in January.

Night club proprietor Bennie C. Caldwell, already indicted for tampering with the same jury, was named with Gary.

Both men were charged with conspiracy as well as the substantive count of obstructing justice.

First Charge May Be Dropped

Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz told reporters that the first Caldwell indictment would probably be dropped.

Yesterday's indictment was returned by the January term grand jury, which was not discharged at the end of its regular term, April 1.

In the indictment it is alleged that Gary went to the home of Juror Luraner D. Ivey, 49 47th st. se., on January 23, and offered her money for a not guilty verdict.

Tampering Allegations Cited

On the same day, according to the indictment, at 1329 Montello ave. ne., Caldwell offered money to the husband of Juror Sallie J. Walker for a not guilty verdict.

Caldwell is also charged with offering money to Robert Fraction, a member of the jury panel, but not a Lewis juror, on January 19.

Lewis, Attilio Acalotti, and Frank Billeci were convicted after the jurors deliberated 19 hours, and had reported themselves hopelessly deadlocked on at least two occasions. They have appealed.

Garden Produces Another Bud

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

MR. AND MRS. NEVILLE MILLER introduced their daughter, Miss Katherine Miller, to their friends at a garden tea yesterday at their home on Garfield st., and a bit later in the afternoon the young friends of the debutante came for dancing. Miss Miller (Teeny to family and friends) wore an ankle-length bouffant white organdy frock with a wide band of embroidered organdy around the hem and shoulder straps of the embroidery holding the slim bodice. She carried white daisies with yellow iris buds. Mrs. Miller's gown, also ankle-length, was of turquoise organdy and she had tucked yellow gladioli flowerlets at the waist. The debutante's three sisters—Mrs. Carroll Morgan, jr., Gale, who's just graduated from Vassar, and young Polly, who is 16—were there to assist. Three classmates at Vassar, where Miss Miller has just finished her freshman year, were also on hand. They were Miss Virginia Morton of Charlottesville, Va., who came with her brother Bruce; Miss Louise Clifford of Bronxville, N. Y., and Miss Gertrude Martin of Atlanta, Ga.

Maryland Farm Women Told 'The Luxury of Isolation is Past'

By The Associated Press

Some 1120 Maryland farm women delved into international affairs yesterday as they opened their annual "short course" at the University of Maryland.

They had as their authorities at the general assembly which launched the week of study, discussion and recreation for the delegates from homemakers clubs all over the State John D. Hickerson, Assistant Secretary of State for the United Nations affairs, and Maryland's own Senator Millard E. Tydings, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"Foreign affairs," said Hickerson, "Are the single biggest factor today in the life of every man, woman and child in the country.

"The luxury of isolation is past."

Senator Tydings said the United States must continue its expensive armaments program "Until reason takes the place of force in the world—when this happens we'll have lower taxes and more money for schools, roads and hospitals."

"Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World" is the theme of the five-day study course and both the speakers at the general assembly congratulated the farm women on their interest in world affairs.

Senator Tydings put it: "If democracy is to survive, our citizens must be well informed. International peace is our greatest problem today."

"We admit it is not working as we planned, but the fault lies with the members, not with its principles.

"Despite the 44 Russian vetoes, we must not exclude them from the U. N. It wouldn't be safe to let Russia loose from the pledges she signed in the United Nations Charter. The United Nations then would become just an anti-Soviet alliance.

"What we should do is go on sticking to our principles, hoping that some day the Russians will decide their course of action doesn't pay."

During a question and answer period he was asked about Communist China. The Communists have taken China by default, he said. The recognition of the Communists by admitting them to the United Nations will have no serious effect, he declared, and the United States will not walk out if a majority of the United Nations recommend that the Communist regime in China be admitted.

Women Pilots Of D. C. Will Fly to Parley

Eight members of the Washington Chapter of the 99's (International Women Pilots) will attend the annual convention of the 99's at the Fort Clark Guest Ranch in Brackettville, Texas, today through June 25.

Mrs. Blanche Noyes, national president, and Miss Marjorie Harrison, secretary-treasurer of the Washington Chapter, will join with the mass flight from West Palm Beach where they attended the 99's fourth annual All-Women's Air Maneuvers.

Miss Rosemary Lane, chairman of the chapter and one of the convention delegates, and Miss Louise Milliken are flying to Texas from Greenville, S. C., where they attended the ceremonies in honor of the 99's Transcontinental race pilots.

Mrs. Wendell H. Moore, Miss Mary K. Willis, Mrs. Ana Luisa Branger and Miss Jean Ross Howard will fly directly to the ranch from Washington.

Mrs. Branger, who is the cultural attache of the Venezuelan Embassy, recently established a new world altitude record for light planes.

A full program is being planned for the 21st annual convention—a rodeo, a trip to Mexico, barbecue, banquet, receptions, and outdoor sports are on the agenda.

Childless Wife Whose Spouse Is Kindly Fellow And Whose Marriage Has Been Pleasant, Asks How To Go About Annexing Her Best Friend's Husband

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 41 years of age, have been married 21 years and these years of marriage have gone along pleasantly enough. My husband is a kindly, considerate person. Our marriage has been childless, so there are no children to complicate the problem I wish to discuss.

Some years ago my best friend got married and she and her husband moved to our neighborhood. We belong to the same clubs and have the same friends, and her husband and mine immediately became good friends too. As a result we became a foursome, going everywhere together.

From the beginning I was attracted to Jim. I'll call him. I tried to ignore the feeling but as time went on I realized I was falling in love with him. I then tried to avoid the couple without seeming obvious, telling myself what an old fool I was. But we were thrown constantly in their company through mutual friends.

To condense the story, about a year ago we started meeting secretly, in a short time were having an affair, and now I am hopelessly in love with him. He tells me he is in love with me too and wants to marry me. My sole wish and dream is to be his wife. I have never been unirue to my marriage vows before and I know he hasn't either. This is not the usual cheap affair. It is something we both have tried honestly to fight, but we find the only thing either of us wants is to be together.

How can I tell my husband and ask for a divorce? How can I have Jim tell his wife? All we can see for our future is marriage to each other, because our whole life is each other. Are we not entitled to this happiness?

V. C.

Immaturity Woos Irresponsibility

DEAR V. C.: It occurs to me that the immaturity of your character and the irresponsibility of Jim's wove the bond of attraction that led by routine steps and mutual contrivance to your present distracted state. And evaluating the experience in terms of your reporting, I see no warrant for your special pleading that this isn't the usual cheap affair. What else is it, pray tell?

According to Webster's definition, a thing is cheap which costs little effort or trouble to obtain. And it seems that you and Jim entered this intrigue on a deadhead basis, in the sense that your initial aim was to have a liaison without forfeiting your respective mates and without losing face with neighbors and friends. In short, at no cost to yourselves; rather, as a stolen dividend of "happiness."

This attempt to get something for nothing has bogged down in mutual frustration, largely because you and Jim are equally selfish and shallow, I think. And you mistakenly assume that your frustration fever, let's call it, might be wondrously cured if you could negotiate full-time companionship. But I challenge that notion.

Because you are fretted by cumulative measure of those morbid insatiable erotic hungers that sneak affairs usually engender, you fancy yourself hopelessly in love with Jim, when the truth is you've drifted from wholesome regard for your good husband into a pathological entanglement with a shortsighted partner in intrigue. This isn't deathless attachment, but rather a kind of emotional affliction, that ordinarily runs its course in comparatively short time. Anywhere from 18 months to two or three years is the average span for such aberrations.

The senseless quality of your behavior is neatly underscored by the fact that you don't know how to explain yourself to your husband, nor how to document a plea for divorce, nor how to face Jim's wife with your fuzzy notion that you must have him for keeps. And surely the high point of confusion is reached in publicly exhorting advice on how to put over the steal in righteous vein, without awkwardness.

Jim probably won't make a move to leave his wife, and as you begin to prod him in the matter, he will automatically build defenses and reservations against you, and on this dismal note the curtain will gradually fall on your foolish defeated pursuit of him. You will be fortunate in that time if your husband still is disposed to be a kindly, considerate helpmeet to you.

Dangers to Peace

Rep. Bolton Warns Navy Mothers of 'Too Much Talk'

REPRESENTATIVE Frances P. Bolton of Ohio yesterday cautioned against talking too much about the military machines we are perfecting. "If we talk too much we will do too little," she said.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Navy Mothers Clubs of America at the Mayflower Hotel, Representative Bolton said, "I want to urge you to grow quietly in strength and talk less . . . about the things we are perfecting. We must not stop working. It is our duty to protect the peace. The only language the forces that oppose us understand is force."

She also talked of the dangers to peace created by radio, television and the newspapers since "half-baked things are credited and so much harm is done."

The road to peace is rough, she acknowledged, but we must assure that it has "some kind of probability, possibility and certainty."

Mrs. Bolton, who had just come from a House Foreign Affairs Committee meeting, pointed out that we must "give protection to the lanes of peace." She asserted that the United States had been able to develop as quickly as it had because England guarded the seas.

We must protect the freedom of the world, but most of all the freedom here in this country, Mrs. Bolton added. "We are not half enthusiastic enough about what we have," she said. The opportunity to choose what kind of education we want, what church we will go to or whether to go to church or play golf on a Sunday morning, are freedoms we sometimes forget to appreciate, she said.

Praised Work Of Mothers' Clubs

MRS. BOLTON praised the work of the Navy Mothers Clubs in the veterans hospitals and told them she had no anxiety about the fate of the Navy. Commending the work of Admiral Forrest Sherman, chief of Naval Operations, Mrs. Bolton said "Our Navy has never been as fine as it is today."

Also on the program was Gen. F. R. Kerr, assistant administrator for the Veterans Administration Special Services, who also praised the work of the Navy Mothers.

Volunteer services in veterans' hospitals amounted to 357,000 hours by 77,000 volunteers last month alone, he said. The Navy Mothers, who are part of this vast band of volunteer workers, can be assured they contribute something that paid workers never can, he said. They bring to the patient a bit of the community, the life the boy is used to and hopes to go back to, he said.

"It can't be measured in figures or dollars," the general claimed. The job is a continuous one and will not be finished "in your lifetime nor in mine," he told the group and said he hoped they would continue to grow in their interest in the veterans hospital program.

A fashion show by Frank R. Jelleff, Inc. followed the speakers. Mrs. Emma Davis of Cincinnati, national organizer, spoke briefly, and the invocation was given by Lieut. E. Hemphill, CHC, USN. Co-chairmen of the luncheon were Mrs. Evelyn McCoy and Mrs. Maude Leslie.

Yesterday's program of activities included a morning and afternoon business sessions presided over by Mrs. Elsie M. Peterson, national commander, and a memorial service last evening with Mrs. Martha McAllister, National second vice commander, presiding.

Ask Anne

If Apartment Walls Can't Take It, A Dime Store 'Pin-Up' Gadget Will Curtail Damaging Blows of Hammer

DEAR ANNE:

I am trying to make my small apartment more livable. If I could put up narrow shelves along the walls I could rid the rooms of a lot of clutter. But the walls are plaster! Isn't there some way to fasten brackets or nails so shelves won't pull out? I would like to use the shelves for books, etc.

B. K., Washington.

You can buy special 'pin-up' gadgets in any ten-cent store designed to carry weight without damage to a wall. These each consist of a flat brace which runs parallel to the wall, fitted with a nail running through it at an angle. The gadget seems to hold better than anything else in plaster, and comes in sizes which will hold up to 100 pounds (it says on the package). To give further support, put a strip of cellophane tape over the spot where you intend to drive the nail. This keeps the plaster from crumbling around the nail. Adhesive tape can also be used, and can be painted the same color as the wall. However, I would not place objects which will be moved often on these shelves. Plaster will support quite a lot of steady weight, but jarring or movement will tend to work the nails loose.

DEAR ANNE:

I am going to have an informal party and am writing you for information on the refreshments to be served. There will be 14 ladies. I've thought about small sandwiches, made of white and some brown breads, but was stumped as to fillings. I would like several kinds of sandwhich fillings.

I thought of serving punch with the sandwiches, potato chips, nuts or mints. Do you think this combination would be proper to serve? Could I use fancy paper plates and cups to match instead of glass dishes?

Daily Reader, Alexandria, Va.

Your plans sound quite appropriate. If you're going to serve several types of sandwiches, you might dispense with the potato chips and have cookies later, instead. However, this is a matter of your own taste. Since the occasion will be informal, the pretty paper plates and cups will be fine. They'll look quite gay and summery. Three sandwich filling suggestions follow:

DEVILED HAM SPREAD—Two 5-ounce cans deviled ham, ⅓ cup mayonnaise, 1 cup cottage cheese. Mix well and spread on thin bread, with crusts removed.

EGG-AND-MUSTARD SPREAD—Chop up hard-cooked eggs. Season with salt and pepper and moisten to spreading consistency with mayonnaise. Add minced onion and mustard to taste.

TASTY CHEESE SPREAD—One-half pound American cheese, shredded; ¼ cup chili sauce, 2 teaspoons minced onion. Blend the cheese, chili sauce and onions and spread on thin slices of bread.

The form your sandwiches takes helps vary them as much as the filling. Maybe you'd like to make some in the shapes of roll-ups." To do this, spread any of the above fillings on a thin slice of bread. Roll up each slice and fasten with toothpick if necessary. Place them on damp towel and cover with another damp towel. Keep in refrigerator until serving time.

Another form they might take is ribbon sandwiches. Use both whole wheat and white bread. Take three thin slices and put them together either with creamed butter or a sandwich spread. Put a dark slice between two light ones, or a light one between two dark ones. Wrap sandwiches in damp cheese-cloth or waxed paper, put a plate on top to weight them down, and chill ½ hour or more. Just before serving, cut in ¼-inch slices.

Simpler, of course, are finger sandwiches. Cut sandwiches, with crusts removed, in ¼-inch slices, crust removed, into ½-inch strips. Sandwiches may be also cut in small rounds, oblongs, triangles, stars, or crescents with a deep cookie cutter.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

AMERICA'S LARGEST SELLING SUGARS

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THE Wardman Park Hotel has opened a new room, the Caribar, and has a floor show for the first time in the hotel's history. For the special event, they've engaged Darly Harpa, a snap showman and musician. Harpa has his own rumba band and stages the floor show with his own troupe.

MARNA

Harpa himself is the good-looking result of Spanish-Arab parents. He is an accomplished cellist and has appeared with his band at Ciro's, the Broadmoor Hotel in Colorado Springs and Slapsie Maxie's in Los Angeles. His Latin wife, Marna Paige, is the best of the troupe—petite, fiery and exotic.

Favorite act in the show is a hilarious skit between a would-be psychiatrist and his patient. The comedian is Lenny Ges. Other members of the troupe are Maria Cardos, Dancers Jeff and Barbara James and two veterans of the Katherine Dunham dance group, William Joyce and Russell Collquett.

Harpa's band has been on television in Washington each week since March 29, when RCA first demonstrated its new color system. Harpa signed a contract with WNBW for daily color telecasts. The RCA color system, which is compatible with black and white television, has made it possible for home viewers to see the "Rainbow Revue," featuring Daryl Harpa, on present TV sets.

GABRIEL CHRISTOL, the round and jolly chef at Michel's, is all ready for summertime diners. Cold buffet plates and galantine of capon, seasoned Marseilles style, top Gabriel's cuisine. Cold soups for hot weather are another Gabriel specialty. They'll include cold minestrone, madrilene and a beautiful pink borscht, as well as the always popular vichysoisse.

Christol's talents never fail, but Teddy, the son of Michel, who has recently taken over the managing duties of the music lovers' spot, is learning to cook the hard way. At 3 o'clock one morning Teddy became inspired by a magazine picture of a three-layer cake. Taking over the empty kitchen, he ventured into cake baking.

But his effort wound up as a one-layer cake. Of the other two layers, one was snatched by the family cat and the other might have passed for a number of things, including armor plate, but never a cake.

Berle Ran Up a Bill

Video Pie-Throwing A Cleaners' Bonanza

NEW YORK, June 20 (AP).—The cleaning industry has been finding a well-paying customer in television. That's a result of such slapstick antics as pie throwing and seltzer bottle squirting in which costumes, props and other studio equipment take a real spattering.

A late example was Milton Berle's season finale with the help of Dean Martin, Jerry Lewis and Gertrude Niesen. They wound up literally ripping down the studio in a super-hilarious goodby until September. Their attire took as much of a beating as the props.

These outbursts give plenty of extra work to the network's scrubbing staff, which often has to get really strenuous in mopping up; to the scenery workers, who on numerous occasions have to refurbish the props completely; to tailors, who have to repair damaged costumes; and, last but not least, to the dry cleaners, who have to put suits and dresses back as far as possible into their original state.

No one has kept any exact figures on the cleaning bill, but it is believed to run to several hundred dollars a week when Berle and other telecasters are in full swing. For the most part, costumes are rented from outside sources, the fee paid covering reconditioning costs. If they are too badly damaged, they have to be replaced by the renter.

This prolific use of slapstick tricks is giving the youngest generation a somewhat different impression about ordinary household devices. Jack Paar, recently returned to NBC as quizmaster comedian of Take It Or Leave It, insists that as a result of watching TV, his 14-month-old daughter, just beginning to talk, believes that every telephone squirts seltzer water.

A Boost for FM

FREQUENCY modulation radio, which has had rough going since its inception, has received a strong plug from Chairman Wayne Coy of the Federal Communications Commission.

Coy the other day urged that all television manufacturers equip their sets so they will tune in FM radio. He points out that television already uses FM for the sound part of its program, and that it's relatively inexpensive to equip a video set to bring in FM radio as well.

This can be done for much less than the cost of adding standard radio to a set, or building a separate FM set. A few television manufacturers include FM radio in their sets now.

If all manufacturers did so, Coy said, FM "could ride TV piggyback up the ladder of success."

However, most set makers have been cool to the idea on two counts: (1) it would add to the cost of their sets at a time when all are trying to sell at the lowest price possible, and (2) the great mass of the public has shown no particular enthusiasm for FM radio.

About Six Million

MANY reasons have been advanced for the slow progress of FM, but the principal one appears to be that its claimed advantages of no static and high fidelity have not appealed to the average listener enough to induce him to buy a separate FM set or pay more for a standard radio set in order to have FM included.

The result has been that there probably are fewer than six million radio sets in use throughout the country although there are 700 FM stations on the air. Lacking large audiences such as those of standard radio, FM broadcasters have had a hard time selling advertising and most of them still operate in the red. In fact, more than 30 FM stations have called it quits since the first of the year.

However, most FM broadcasters maintain confidently that their form of radio not only will survive, but ultimately will become the dominant form of radio broadcasting.

* * *

A NATIONAL television and electronics exposition is being planned here September 23-30. Irving Fromer, director, says it will be the first showing for the public in one exhibit of sets, equipment and other products of the major manufacturers.

Rain Halts 'Aida' After Second Act

By Paul Hume

Amonasro, King of the Ethioplans, turned into something like Big Chief Rain-in-The-Face last night when a down pour halted "Aida" at the climax of the Triumph Scene.

Anton Marco, as the captive king of the Ethiopians, had just concluded his first scene; the Grand March and Chorus was filling the loudspeakers with the favorite music of thousands of opera lovers—and the skies opened up with a wet barrage that stopped the show quicker than the most sensational singers in history.

A large audience gathered at the Watergate to hear the San Carlans version of Aida. The evening looked sort of doubtful—you know — as if it might rain, and yet as if it might clear up.

Before the flood landed, two acts of Aida had been well sung and mounted. The scenery was the most convincing Gallo has brought out so far. Costumes and staging, especially the ballet, surpassed previous nights.

Alessandro Granda, as Rhadames, was in noticeably smoother voice than last season, and handled the role well. Marco had hardly more than a moment as Amonasro to show his finest singing.

Had the rain held off, Aida would have taken high place in the San Carlo list for this week. Rescingo was in his best form leading the work.

Tonight: "Faust," with Cravi, Crain, and Wilderman.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 20 (AP).—Philco Corp. displaced today 34 new models of television receivers with prices averaging 25 per cent less than comparable models of last January.

Prices on the new line ranged from 30 to 40 percent below those of last summer.

300-Lb. Grizzly Finds College Is Unbearable

Blacksburg, Va., June 20 (Spl.).—A 300-pound black grizzly bear did about everything but matriculate at Virginia Polytechnic Institute here today.

Appearing out of nowhere and bent on nothing in particular, the bear ambled through the college trailer camp, broke up a sandlot baseball game, lumbered around the main dining hall and library, passed through the main gate and disappeared into the hills.

It was reportedly shot by a farmer after being pursued by hundreds of townspeople in autos, on motorcycles and on foot — some shod, some bare.

District Man Fined For Whisky Transport

William Roy Saunders, 55, of 1425 Trinidad ave. ne., yesterday was fined $150 and received a suspended jail sentence of six months in Arlington County Court after pleading guilty to a charge of illegal transportation of whisky across State lines.

Saunders was arrested at 7:30 p. m. Monday by County Detectives Russell Runyon and Frank Keys, who had a search warrant for Saunders' car. He said they found 20 cases of whisky in the car. Saunders told them he was taking the liquor to North Carolina, the detectives reported.

Rendezvous With a Fugitive

One of the most difficult assignments of a reporter is to describe a story in which he himself is an actor . . . Any transaction in which the life of a man is involved is delicate . . . When an accused man, through emissaries, offers to surrender through you, the first thing you make clear is the thing you can't do. You carefully explain of the case . . . That you will be party to no "deal" with the police that you are without authority in any way—to affect the merits and that the accused fully understands he is not putting his fate in your hands but in the courts of justice.

On the broadcast of June 19, 1949, I reported (for the first time) the initials of the two men wanted in the Lurye murder case . . . "B. M." and "J. G." . . . I suggested they come in to me—so that the $25,000 reward ("Dead or Alive") could go to the Runyon Cancer Fund . . . I had forgotten the cancer fund angle when I was approached (a month ago) by people I never met before . . . "Would you be interesting in bringing in 'B. M.'?" said the party. "He has been thinking over what you said on the radio last year. He feels that since he is being accused of taking a life—he would be doing a decent thing in coming in to you—so that the reward could save lives some day."

This speaker then arranged for me to discuss it with others . . . The conversations lasted from two to three hours for three nights in succession . . . That was early June . . . "Besides the Runyon Fund angle," I remarked during the first meeting, "what else do you expect from me?"

"Nothing," said the spokesman, "except maybe you would be interested in knowing something about Benedict Macri. He has never been in any trouble until this thing happened. He has never been arrested—not even a parking ticket or passing a red light. He has a wife and children. This might never get in the papers and we thought maybe you would write that."

On the broadcast of June 4th last I appealed to "B. M." again . . . I reported what I had been told about his clean record and to come in . . . That night I received a phone call . . . The voice said that was fine . . . More than they ever expected . . . To be patient . . . I would be repaid soon . . . "He is in such a deep freeze," said the voice, "it isn't easy to dig him up."

A few nights later I was instructed to visit them at a midtown apartment. "There seems to be a hitch," said the party. "Benedict's lawyer is against the whole thing. He doesn't want any newspaperman to do it. He thinks it would offend the District Attorney."

"That's all right," I said. "I understand. Declare me out."

"But Benedict doesn't want to come in except through you," said the emissary. "Would you find out what the D.A. thinks?"

The following afternoon I telephoned District Attorney Hogan . . . "I have a chance to bring in a fugitive wanted for a homicide in New York. Have you any objections?" . . . Mr. Hogan paused briefly . . . "Why no," he said, "go right ahead." Then after another pause, Mr. Hogan added: "If you mean Macri—we have been expecting him any day. We've worked hard on this thing for a year."

"I am interested, of course," I said, "in the $25,000 reward for the Runyon Fund, and I am told your office might not like my being any part of the surrender. If you say so, I'll clear out."

"No," said Mr. Hogan, "we've tried for a year. Go ahead."

After I reported all that to the contacts—they assured me Macri would come in "positively Wednesday night" . . . I phoned the Daily Mirror city desk to get out all the clips on the Lurye case and to get ready for a break . . . Wednesday at sundown a phone call told me it was off . . . "Positively Thursday night. Please be patient with us" . . . Thursday evening at 7 another call informed that something went wrong—that it couldn't be Thursday night—but positively Friday night! . . . But an hour before the delivery was to be made—another call said: "It can't happen tonight, sorry. We can't tell you why. We can positively arrange it tomorrow, Saturday night."

"That's when I have to go to work," I said gloomily, "Saturday night is when I have to get a broadcast started and a column for the paper. I haven't had much sleep since I met you people. What are the Macris doing to the Winchells?" . . . "What," groaned the voice, "are the Macris doing to the Macris?"

At 8:30 Sunday evening I phoned for instructions . . . "Positively tonight," I was assured. "Phone us at 9:15" . . . I call them at 9:16 . . . I was instructed to go to an address in midtown near one of the rivers . . . "Where do you think it will happen," I asked, "so I can send the Mirror photographers and a reporter?" . . . "Where do you want it?" . . . "At the southeast corner of 20th st. and 8th ave." . . . "Okay. About 10 o'clock."

From the midtown location in the 50s I was driven to the "scene" via 27th st. (the identical route used to meet Lepke 11 years ago) where I told the Mirror radio car to park somewhere near the station-house on 20th st. . . . Then for nearly an hour and half nothing happened as I sat in a car—waiting . . . The only thing that made me feel it would come off was seeing Macri's lawyer nearby . . . A pedestrian came over and asked: "Something gonna happen around here?" . . . Two police prowl cars slowed down nearby as I hand-covered my face . . . From a corner saloon a radio whodunit was being overacted. "I tell you, Malone, you can't get away with this!" . . . I was jittery . . . The emissary said: "You're getting ME nervous; I told them 10 o'clock" . . . He went in to the bar and brought me a brandy.

It was nearing 11 . . . The contact suddenly walked away . . . I saw a man talk to him . . . He came back and said: "He's in the black coupe three cars ahead" . . . I signaled to the Mirror men—as I approached the coupe . . . The fugitive was ready . . . We strolled down the street to the Tenth Precinct . . . The photographers flashed several shots . . . The Mirror radio car driver phone-flashed the city desk to replate . . . The only person who seemed calm was B. M. . . . To the officer behind the desk I said: "I am a reporter on the Daily Mirror. This man is wanted for murder. His name is Benedicto Macri."

Don't Figure On Beating This Brain

The National Bureau of Standards yesterday unveiled the newest, and supposedly fastest, "Big Brain" in the electronic computing field.

It can add or subtract sets of 11-digit numbers (less than 100 billion) at the rate of 1100 times a second. It multiplies and divides such numbers at the slower rate of 330 times a second.

Built by NBS for the Air Force, SEAC, in trial operations, has already proved itself useful in programming large-scale enterprises for the Air Force, officials at yesterday's demonstration said.

For demonstration purposes the officials cited the display problem of what whole numbers will evenly go into 99,999,999,977 (billions). SEAC, they said, found the number a prime factor, that is divisible only by itself and one, within 30 minutes.

A man working with a desk calculator eight hours a day would take about two months to do the same problem, they said.

SEAC, with its 100,000 soldered connections, is housed in two consoles, roughly piano and grand piano sizes. Like kindred electronic computers, it still takes a team of mathematicians and engineers to operate it.

Laborites Defeat New Attacks on Tax Measures

London, June 20 (U.P.).—The Labor government beat down a series of Conservative attacks in commons tonight, including a demand that all sales taxes be reduced by about 20 percent.

Conservative Oliver Lyttelton asserted that sales taxes—called purchase taxes in Britain now cost each member of the community 4½ shillings a week out of a wage of 6£—that is, 63 cents out of $16.80.

The Conservative demand for reduction was defeated by a vote of 288 to 280.

A 33-1/3 percent sales tax on motor trucks, which the Conservatives bitterly opposed, was approved by a vote of 287 to 276.

A Conservative motion to exempt allowances of army, navy and air force officers from income tax was defeated 296 to 266. A motion to exempt allowances and pensions of war widows was rejected 288 to 257.

Shriners Parade Before 50,000

Los Angeles, June 20 (AP).—All the color and pageantry of the Mystic Shrine were arrayed before 50,000 spectators in the vast Memorial Coliseum as 13,000 Nobles paraded today.

Mounted and marching units in many-hued costumes filed into the stadium in a six-hour pageant.

The downtown parade which culminated in the Coliseum was the high point so far in the seventy-sixth imperial session of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Some 135,000 Shriners are here from all parts of the United States. Deputations also are present from Canada, Mexico and Hawaii.

Air Guard Officer Hurt in Crash Near Pittsburgh

An Air National Guard officer on 180-day temporary duty at the Pentagon was injured yesterday afternoon when his F-51 plane crashed four miles west of Pittsburgh.

Maj. Walter J. Scherrel of the Buckley Air Force Base, Denver, Colo., suffered a broken arm, an injured shoulder and mild shock, Andrews Air Base officials reported.

Scherrel was taken to the Sewickley Hospital, where his condition was listed as not serious. His home is in Newport, Ark.

Outside Job Ban Lifted For Police

County Manager Irving G. McNayr yesterday rescinded a previous order prohibiting county police from part-time employment outside their police duties.

Acting as director of public safety, McNayr met with Chief of Police Charles M. Orme and then issued the surprise reversal of the former stand taken by county officials.

Under the new order, policemen must make written request for permission to take outside jobs, each case to be decided on its individual merits.

McNayr's statement said he reviewed the previous order issued May 19 by Chief of Police Orme and that he "is convinced that the order may well work an undue hardship on members of the force."

Chief Orme issued the order May 19. As a result, several policemen resigned and others said they were considering leaving the force.

The County Policemen's Association urged that the order be recalled since it was necessary for a great many of the policemen to hold part-time jobs to supplement their "inadequate police salaries." This request was denied by McNayr and the chief at that time.

Versatility Does It

The 'Mr. Television' Could Be Mr. Taylor

—By C. E. Butterfield—

NEW YORK (AP).—If there's anybody in TV who deserves the label of "Mr. Television" it could very well be Vaughn Taylor. That would be because of his portrayal of so many character roles, literally by the dozens.

Taylor

You've never heard of him? If you watch television, you must have seen him plenty of times. He has been in such a long list of video plays and programs that the latest count shows he has done at least 130 roles.

In one series alone, the Wednesday night Television Theater on NBC, he will be making his 27th appearance this week when he is Noah in the play of the same name.

Producers say Taylor is used often because of his versatility. He can assume almost any role from a gnarled-hand farmer to a dignified 90-year-old British poet. They class him as a "good actor" with an excellent memory.

Taylor moved into television shortly after the war and has been kept busy ever since. His background includes experience in the Army, in radio as an announcer and on the stage in summer stock. Of the characters he assumes, that of the New Englander probably is the easiest. He says that's because he's a native of Boston.

SUMMER revision of television schedules, now under way, includes the fill-in for the Fred Waring hour on CBS-TV Sunday night, to be effective from July to September 24. Fay Emerson moves up to take the first 15 minutes. She will be followed by a half-hour comedy theater based on stories from foremost writers, and a 15-minute film series.

Two talent type shows are in prospect for CBS-TV: One for Sunday evenings will have Robert Alda from the movies as MC under the title of Popular Demand. The other, Prize Performance, is to run eight weeks from July 3 in TV time of the Godfrey Talent Scouts. Cedrig Adams will be in charge.

New transfers into television include John Conte of the movies and Wayne King of the waltzes. Conte is to be host of Little Show, a twice-weekly sponsored series for NBC-TV opening June 27. King will present his orchestra on eight Midwest NBC-TV stations for a sponsor from July 6 through September 24.

PICKED to help fill the NBC summer television schedule is a weekly series from the Lewisohn Stadium concerts provided by the New York Philharmonic symphony orchestra. They are to run 13 weeks in the Monday night time that the sponsored Robert Montgomery theater will be off the air, beginning June 26. The network said this would be the first time for the concerts in television.

When the 16-year-old Radio Theater of CBS closes its season June 26, it will complete William Keighley's fifth year as producer-host of the drama hour. He joined the program in 1945, after the original MC, Cecile B. DeMille, went out of the broadcast in a union dispute over a payment into a political fund. As usual, the network will supply the relief programs for eight weeks. They will be two half-hour comedies, Granby's Green Acres and Count Your Blessings.

RANSOM SHERMAN, veteran broadcaster once one of the original Three Doctors, zany comedy act, and later MC of Club Matinee, is switching to television. His first job will be the summer fill for Kukla, Fran and Ollie on NBC-TV starting July 3 for eight weeks. Under a long-term contract, Sherman will continue at another time in the fall.

Good Old Summertime (D. C. Style)

PEN PAL

I had to write a check the other day, but I didn't have a pen because I had left mine at home. It leaks so much I hate to carry it.

As I borrowed a pen from Bill Reith in the next office, I noticed that it was the same make. When he held up a warning finger, I thought I knew what he was going to caution me about; but he fooled me with:

"Be careful of that pen . . . it usually writes 'William F. Reith' on the bottom line."

GALLAHER CUTS UP AN EASY MARK

In a recent column I expressed the opinion that WTOP's Mark Evans could whip that station's Sundial and Moondial man, Eddie Gallaher, at golf. I offered to back my opinion with a bet of an ice cream soda.

It mortifies me to report what happened next. Gallaher and Evans sneaked off to some unidentified golf course and popped up several hours later with the announcement that I had lost an ice cream soda because Gallaher had triumphed, one up.

"Bill Mougey and Earl Gammons completed the foursome, and will verify the result," I was informed. "So pay up."

Pay up, indeed.

I wasn't there. I didn't see the match. I don't know but what they just sat around the clubhouse all afternoon working out a deal to cut me up, and never even played golf at all. And yet they expect me to pay up.

I still say Evans can beat Gallaher, but I'm not paying off unless the time and place of the match is announced in advance, and the issue is settled publicly. No star chamber tactics. No executive sessions.

What's more, I think they ought to invite two more golfing announcers to join them in the playoff. Jerry Strong, for one. He shoots a rough game at times. And maybe WRC's Steve Douglas. Come to think of it, they could play on a weekend, and invite their fans to come out and watch.

Everybody would enjoy the fresh air, sunshine and golf—except maybe the guy who buys the ice cream sodas.

ANYHOW, HE MADE IT

"Your item about drawbridges was very interesting," says Post Reporter Sam Zagoria. "I have a sequel for you.

"After fidgeting about all evening, my wife finally informed me that it was time to crank up the family car and head for Washington and the hospital.

"It was then 2:30 a. m. which, I understand, is the approved time for such events.

"There was no traffic on the streets, and we made good time until we reached that brand new bridge across the Potomac. Its drawbridge was up.

"'Where's the boat?' asked my wife. I told her I didn't see any. 'Then what's the drawbridge up for?' she wanted to know.

"I asked the man on duty. 'There's no boat,' he explained. 'We have to raise the drawbridge once a day to check it, and it hasn't been up yet today—so this is it.'

"I knew what was coming next. He added: 'We pick 2:30 a. m. because there's practically nobody out at this hour, and those that are out aren't in any hurry.'

"I couldn't bear to explain that my wife was practically ready to have her baby right on his bridge, so I just went back to the car and waited. Besides, I don't think he'd have believed me anyhow."

A bulletin from Garfield Hospital: It was a girl, 6 pounds and 13 ounces. Mother and daughter are doing fine. Sam is expected to be on his feet again in a few days.

Eavesdropping Case Recounted

By Drew Pearson

Eavesdropping is an old family pastime with Maine's Senator Owen Brewster, who, as this column revealed, tapped the telephone wires of California airplane manufacturer Howard Hughes.

Brewster

More than three years ago — February 18, 1947 — Senator Brewster appeared before a Judiciary Subcommittee to oppose the appointment of John Clifford as United States District Judge for Maine. The Senator explained that Clifford went to Brewster's hotel room to discuss a local housing problem.

"He said he would come up to my hotel room and see me," Brewster continued. "I did something which I have never done before, and I do not think I will ever do again. We had two rooms at the hotel, the door open between, and I asked Mrs. Brewster to listen to the conversation."

Since then it's been a standing joke in Maine whenever anyone mentions having a talk with Senator Brewster to ask: "And was Mrs. B standing behind the door?"

Bow to Diogenes

Most Congressmen are scrupulously honest about taking gratuities for introducing legislation for their constituents — unlike Congressman Wood of Georgia, whose office collected $1000 for passing a bill compensating Ralph Stanfield after he was crippled by a U. S. Army truck.

For example, when Senator Sparkman of Alabama was still a Representative, he introduced a private bill to compensate a constituent who also had been injured by an Army truck. The constituent was so grateful that he deposited $500 in the bank in Sparkman's name and sent the deposit slip to Sparkman.

This was promptly returned, however, with a courteous note, thanking the constituent but asking him to keep his money.

After Sparkman changed the deposit back to the constituent's name, the bank returned the worthless deposit slip to Sparkman, across it was scribbled: "At last Diogenes can put down that lantern."

McCarthy's $10,000

There may be more than meets the eye behind the $10,000 paid to Senator Joe McCarthy of Wisconsin by the now bankrupt Lustron Corp. for writing a 7000-word booklet on housing.

It's well known that the $10,000 the Lustron people paid McCarthy was part of the RFC millions which the Government advanced to Lustron. Thus, in effect, all the American taxpayers helped to subsidize the Senator from Wisconsin.

But not generally known is that McCarthy had done a terrific job for the real estate lobby prior to receipt of the fee. Not only had he engaged in a tenacious, vitriolic battle against the housing bill—a battle just as tenacious as his present row over alleged communism in Government—but he also dominated the appointment of a House-Senate Housing Committee supposed to investigate the need for public housing.

In the closed-door battle over the appointment of this committee, in October, 1947, Senator Tobey of New Hampshire, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, turned up with the proxies of four Senators in his pocket. All four would have voted against McCarthy.

Whereupon McCarthy moved that the committee refuse to honor proxies. Such a refusal is almost unheard of in congressional committees. However, McCarthy had a scant majority of the committee with him, and got away with it. He then obtained the appointment of New York's Congressman Gamble, a foe of housing, as chairman of the housing committee, with himself as vice chairman. It was as vice chairman that McCarthy spent the taxpayers' money to tour the country studying housing, and later cashed in on that trip by getting $10,000 from the Lustron Corp.

McCarthy's Taxes

His income tax for 1948 may show the reason why. As filed in the State of Wisconsin, McCarthy's tax return shows his total income was $28,947, including his Senate salary of $12,500 plus the $10,000 from Lustron, plus $4,535 in dividends from the Milwaukee and the Central of Georgia railroads. However, McCarthy also lists losses to the tune of $25,881 which he claimed from the sale of securities of the same railroads.

McCarthy had failed to pay taxes on about $45,000 of income during the war, for which the State of Wisconsin and the Federal Government later nicked him. At that time he claimed he was out of the country and did not have to pay taxes, though as a Wisconsin judge he must have known that every member of the armed forces had to pay his taxes just the same.

McCarthy's 1948 tax return would indicate he had sold his railroad securities in order to pay his earlier tax deficiency. Perhaps he needed the money from Lustron in order to make up this deficit.
